BIG MORMON TABERNACLE IS CROWDED

Charges Bourbons Building Up Hate Against Him Personally in Campaign FOR SILVER PARLEY

America's Leadership in Cause of Peace is Emphasized During Speech

MORMON TABERNACLE, SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 7.—(UP)—President Hoover charged today the Democratic campaign was "based on the assumption that the American people were an ignorant people" and with "building up hate against me personally." He spoke in the Mormon tabernacle which was filled to overflowing.

He sought again to show that the present economic depression was due to chaotic conditions caused by the after effects of the world war, and charged the Democrats thought the people "could not grasp the meaning" of current events.

He said: "They estimated that our people could not grasp the meaning of our increases in public debt due to the war and the inflation of values in our country. They assumed that the knowledge of those events and their effects upon us had been unobserved. They have had the political foolishness to misjudge that the intelligence of the American people would permit the belief that the boom on the New York stock exchange caused this world calamity and in spite of the fact that we have had similar booms 15 times in the last century and they have not jeopardized our republic or the world."

The president touched on foreign policies and denounced war as a "colossal error as an instrument of national policy."

He declared that "the very first of all problems pressing upon the human race is the problem of prevention of future wars."

He emphasized America's leadership in the cause of peace, and added: "I have made but one reservation and that is we will join no movement to use military or economic force in attempts to pre-

BANDITS ROB PARTY OF $20,000 GEMS

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Two well-dressed bandits who posed as federal prohibition agents invaded the home of a wealthy attorney last night and robbed women guests of $20,000 in jewelry. They were hunted by police today.

The bandits forced servants to accompany them as they entered the dining room of Brooks Mahun's home and lined the guests against the wall. Mrs. Mahun, Mrs. Ralph Hager, wife of a San Francisco haberdasher, Mrs. James Lyons, wife of a screen director, were stripped of valuables but their husbands were not searched. Mrs. Hager reported her loss at $6000.

After advising Mahun that they would telephone him today and "give you a chance to redeem these jewels," the gunmen fled with a companion who waited outside.

Two wires, one national and one state-wide, will bring returns by United Press to The Register. The national wire opens at 4 p. m. and the state wire will open at 7:30 o'clock. Experienced election returns gatherers will bring local results from every precinct in Orange county.

RECORD COUNTY VOTE EXPECTED BY CANDIDATES

Nominees Express Thanks to Voters in Statements Issued Today

REPUBLICANS, Democrats and members of other parties numbering more than 62,000 will send their armies to the 244 precincts in Orange county tomorrow to decide the fate of candidates whose campaigns were closing today and to express their preference for various legislative matters that are to be voted on at the election.

As the election returns from Orange county, the state and nation pour in after the polls have closed at 7 o'clock tomorrow night after opening at 7 a. m., thousands of citizens in this county will know the will of the people as expressed by the great American institution, the ballot box.

The greatest number of voters in the history of the county will go to the polls tomorrow, candidates believe. Absent voter ballots also have reached an unprecedented figure in the county, showing with what interest voters of the county are watching the outcome of the election.

With practically the last political gun fired in the county by aspirants for public office, the following pre-election statements

FATHER OF DANCER DIES IN MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Max Michalski, 63, father of Gilda Gray, the dancer, died yesterday at the county infirmary.

His death removed what Miss Gray had charged was the principal cause of discord in her family.

Committed to the county home in September after his daughter had been ordered by the courts to pay $38 for supplies furnished him by the county outdoor relief department, Michalski was stricken with pneumonia a week ago.

The dancer wired from Springfield, Mass., where she is appearing at a theater, that she would "carry on with the show."

REDONDO EDUCATOR SENTENCED TODAY

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Finish was written today to a strange abduction hoax perpetrated by Elliott B. Thomas, Redondo Beach schoolmaster, when he was sentenced to serve from one to 14 years in prison following his plea of guilty to two charges of forging salary warrants.

SUPREME COURT ORDERS NEW TRIALS IN SCOTTSBORO CASE

Criticizes Conduct Of Trial Court

Decision Read After Disturbances in Capitol Plaza Injure Four

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(UP)—New trials for the seven Negro youths sentenced to death in the Scottsboro assault cases were granted today by the United States supreme court.

The decision was read in the dignified quiet of the supreme court chamber after a series of disturbances in the capitol plaza outside had resulted in injury to four police officers and the arrest of 12 men and women who had demonstrated on behalf of the Scottsboro defendants.

The opinion caustically criticized the conduct of trials of the "young, illiterate, ignorant" defendants at Scottsboro, Ala.

The failure of the youths to obtain adequate legal representation was given as the court's chief concern in reversing the decision of the Alabama supreme court, which had held the original trials were fair in spite of the presence of armed militia and a hostile public attitude.

The opinion was delivered by Justice Sutherland. He reviewed the history of the case and the Negroes' contentions they had been denied fair trials.

Sutherland said that there was no question excepting that the atmosphere was one of "tension and hostility."

It was the duty of the trial court to see the defendants had a fair trial, he continued, noting that the defendants were "boys" illiterate and apparently ignorant.

Referring to the claim the Negroes had not been allowed to choose their counsel, Sutherland recalled that they had quickly been able to obtain excellent legal representation on appeal.

The opinion termed the trial court's appointment of all members of the local bar to represent the defendants as a "gesture."

Even intelligent persons could not guide themselves through the intricacies of legal procedure and protect their rights, Sutherland said, adding that it was then so much more essential for illiterate persons such as the defendants to have adequate counsel.

BUSINESS MEN ARE HURT IN ACCIDENT

DELANO, Calif., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Three prominent Delano business men were in a hospital here today, one of them critically injured, because they swerved their automobile to avoid striking a child.

H. B. Cameron, clothing merchant, was in critical condition from concussion of the brain; William Simons, manager of a cotton gin, was cut and bruised; and Walter Allen, head of the Delano chapter of the American Red Cross, was bruised severely.

A FINAL WORD

The closing hours of this political campaign are upon us. The Register has found it exceedingly difficult to carry on in a political contest. This has been true primarily because the platforms, and so many of the candidates of its own party, are entirely out of harmony with some of the important principles which this paper espouses. And we would reiterate those principles in the closing hours, realizing that the voters are pretty well aware of the attitude which is assumed by the candidates upon them.

We are opposed to the principle of special privilege. We are opposed to any one group of men having a special privilege, either to exploit others, defended and protected by the law, or having a special privilege to violate law.

Our Federal Constitution can only be changed by a resolution passed by Congress, composed of both houses. For that reason, it is important that we elect to both branches of Congress men who are known to believe in sobriety and prohibition. And unfortunately the candidate on our own ticket for the senate made his campaign with liquor as the main issue.

In many sections, candidates for United States Senator and Congress have repudiated the platforms of their respective parties, and maintained openly and frankly an attitude to retain the Eighteenth amendment. Candidates known to stand right upon this question should be supported, regardless of their party affiliations.

In fact, we have noted in recent years in Congress that economic, as well as liquor legislation does not appear to be a partisan question. Democrats and Republicans are for these measures; Democrats and Republicans are opposed to them.

We have been emphasizing from time to time the necessity for reducing government expenditure in every direction possible, in order that the taxpayers who are already over-burdened, should be relieved and protected. It means in many cases the saving of a man's means of livelihood, and in many other cases, his home. We have emphasized our convictions. Early in the campaign—in fact on September 14th, we declared that we are for "all candidates who can be counted upon to stand for the following principles:

"1.—For the enforcement of the law, as an official, which includes the 18th amendment and that he shall not connive with or wink at its violation through personal attitude or official relationship.

"2.—Against secrecy in conducting the public's business.

"3.—Against the domination of any clique or group or the use of influence or power by such groups for personal ends.

"4.—For a definite and immediate curtailment of public expenditures all along the line.

"5.—Against public contracts at increased rates to friends over what they can be gotten for from others.

"6.—To give the taxpayer the benefit of the cheapest rate where a bid can bring down the cost.

"7.—For an equitable and just distribution of the gas tax money.

"8.—In favor of such unity of public funds, so as to insure the judgment of all the supervisors on any expenditure of any considerable amount of money, whenever it may be expended, instead of as now handing each supervisor a share of money to spend as he sees fit, regardless of the necessities of the rest of the county.

"9.—Fair and considerate treatment of the unemployed on the basis that human beings are more important than playing politics."

And in these closing hours, we would reiterate the above, and emphasize that regardless of who is elected, we will uphold these principles, and hope that the men who are elected to official positions will aid in carrying these principles into effect. We would respectfully urge the voters to vote for those men who will make their struggle for these principles easier.

We are elsewhere reprinting the recommendations upon the various amendments and referendum measures. Patriotism should prompt all men and women certainly to vote against propositions one and two, regardless of their attitude upon everything else.

FOREIGN NEWS AT A GLANCE

ESCAPE MOBBIING CORK, Ireland, Nov. 7.—(UP)—William T. Cosgrave, former president, narrowly escaped being mobbed when he addressed a meeting in a movie theater here last night, attacking the Republican administration of President Eamon De Valera. A crowd of about 100, armed with sticks and stones, besieged the theater but were dispersed by a baton charge of police.

KAISER AT LECTURE DOORN, Holland, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The former kaiser has found a new diversion in addition to wood-chopping. Celebration For Hoover Is Planned

California Welcomes Native Son on Arrival in State on Tuesday

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—(UP)—California will welcome home her "native son" when President Hoover arrives in the state tomorrow to cast his ballot and begin resting from the strain of his re-election campaign.

Beginning at Sacramento, where the first organized celebration will be held, receptions, parades and public gatherings will mark the President's route to his home at Palo Alto. Gov. James Rolph Jr., and a body of state officials will meet the special train at Sacramento at 8:30 a. m. and California guardsmen will fire a 21 gun salute. The President then will be taken to the state capitol for a brief formal reception.

San Francisco, meanwhile, is preparing for a slant celebration. The President's train will reach Oakland pier at 11:20 a. m. P. S. T. and a special ferry boat will bring the Hoover party across the bay, arriving at the Ferry building at 11:40 a. m.

A welcoming ceremony there will be followed by a parade up Market street to the civic center, with a military escort leading the way. Since the parade and gathering at the civic center are planned for the noon hour, exceptionally large crowds are expected to jam the streets to greet the President.

"Patience will have nothing to do with this celebration," said Mayor Angelo Rossi. "The President of the United States is coming to San Francisco and we shall give him a real California welcome, as the President deserves."

After an informal luncheon here, the President and his party will start by automobile for Palo Alto at 1:15 p. m., making brief stops at San Francisco, Burlingame, San Mateo and Redwood City.

Upon reaching Palo Alto, the President will be greeted by Mayor Earl Thomas and Robert E.

PROPOSED SLASH IN RATES UNJUSTIFIED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The interstate commerce commission today held unjustified the proposed reduction in railroad rates on canned goods to 10 cents on shipments from Sacramento to San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Richmond and Berkeley.

The commission held the proposed rates would not be reasonably compensatory and that present charges are "very low considering the circumstances in which the various services are performed."

Railroads on Aug. 30, 1932, filed a proposal to reduce the present rate of 12 cents per hundred pounds on canned goods to 10 cents on shipments from Sacramento to San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda, Richmond and Berkeley.

The commission held the proposed rates would not be reasonably compensatory and that present charges are "very low considering the circumstances in which the various services are performed."

THREE KILLED IN CRASH OF PLANE

RANDOLPH, Mass., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Authorities sought today to learn the cause of an airplane crash in which three social registers were killed.

The dead were Frederick Lothrop Ames Jr., wealthy yachtman, Frank R. Sproul, prominent clubman, and Miss Frances Burnett, an aviator and heiress to the "Vanilla millions."

All three were aviators. They took off from Boston airport in a Cessna cabin monoplane that once belonged to Russell Boardman, trans-Atlantic aviator, for Newport, R. I. Airport attendants at Boston said their takeoff was faulty and that Ames righted the ship from two tumbles at 3000 feet before passing from sight.

Milton residents said the plane appeared to be stunting when it passed over there.

Lindy Hoaxer Pays Fine And Released

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Nov. 7.—(UP)—John Hughes Curtis, convicted hoaxer in the Lindbergh kidnapping, appeared dramatically at Hunterdon county courthouse today and received an order suspending execution of his one-year jail sentence.

He paid the fine which was part of his penalty with a single thousand dollar bill today.

Curtis was convicted of giving false information in the hunt that followed the kidnapping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr., last March 1. He was arrested and confessed after the baby's body was found.

RABBI MAGNIN SPEAKS HERE THIS EVENING

Mass Meeting in Poly High School Auditorium to Open at 7:30

ALL ARRANGEMENTS have been completed for the big public meeting this evening at the High School auditorium, at 7:30 o'clock at which Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin of Los Angeles will be the main speaker.

The famous speaker is expected to draw a large attendance from over the entire country, partially because of the popularity of his weekly radio talks and also due to his outstanding leadership in social service and welfare activities.

The meeting which is sponsored by all of the major service clubs and the Community Chest will be the one gathering affiliated with the national welfare and relief mobilization of the National Citizens Committee, it is said.

The gathering will be presided over by J. E. Burke and Rev. Harry Owings. Harry Garstang will lead community singing and Arthur Cannon will be at the piano.

There will be a few short talks by community leaders of Santa Ana. However, in the main the meeting is to be given over to the address of Rabbi Magnin.

The sponsoring committee has asked that those attending make it a point to be on hand promptly at 7:30 in order that the meeting can start on schedule and close at an early hour.

Through the Boy Scouts ushers to be supplied and all of the way through, the gathering is to be conducted as a strictly community affair.

"As a last word before the meeting, let us assure everyone that this meeting tonight will be one of the really big events of the year and all who attend will long appreciate the opportunity which they had," says W. J. Tway, Chest president.

JOHN GARNER GOES FISHING IN TEXAS

UVALDE, Tex., Nov. 7.—(UP)—Speaker John Garner, Democratic candidate for vice president, was "out on the river some where fishing" today as the national campaign drew to a close.

The blue-eyed, bluff Garner "took to the chapparral country" Saturday after slipping away from Washington Thursday night and coming home by train. His return was so quiet few knew of it.

LIBERALS LEAD IN NICARAGUA BALLOT

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The Liberals were leading by a comfortable majority in incomplete returns today from yesterday's presidential election, although the conservative strongholds were yet to be heard from.

Scattered returns gave the liberal candidate, Juan B. Sacasa, a lead of 18,000. Liberal congressional candidates showed similar strength. The Liberal majority in Managua was 2500. The conservative candidate, former president Adolfo Diaz, made a last minute bid for support when he arrived by airplane from the United States.

VICTORY IS CLAIMED BY TWO PARTIES

Roosevelt and Hoover Will Close Campaigns Tonight With Vote Pleas

G. O. P. National Chairman Says Hoover to Carry Enough Electoral Votes

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(UP)—The most direct and personal clash of political leadership of this century comes to an end tonight, when President Herbert Hoover and Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, conclude their campaigns for the presidency of the United States.

A record breaking number of ballots, estimated at 40,000,000 will be cast tomorrow to decide the result.

President Hoover and Governor Roosevelt, men of contrasting backgrounds, careers, views and fellow workers in the Wilson administration, are the dominating protagonists in the depression election.

But Republicans do not concede the election, although Democrats are claiming it. Republican National Chairman Sanders credits President Hoover with an irreducible minimum of 15 more than a majority of the electoral college.

He included in this list New York, Illinois, and Ohio, loss of any one of which would bring this estimated total below the 266 electoral majority line.

Both candidates, contrary to usual practice, spent the last day of the campaign continuing their appeal to the voters. Mr. Hoover, westward bound to vote, spoke to crowds from his west-bound train. Governor Roosevelt mingled with his neighbors along the Hudson river valley. Both were to make eleventh hour appeals tonight. Former President Coolidge also was to put in a final plea for his successor.

The chief purpose of these final appeals was to bring out the vote. Political workers for the next 24 hours were due to concentrate on this practical task. In close states, the result may turn entirely on which organization gets out the largest percentage of its vote. Casting and counting—these are more important to the average politician now than speeches by the candidates.

Registrations have broken all records. This is considered by most politicians as an indication of their deep interest in the campaign.

The campaign has been less noisy in some respects than that of four years ago. A serious silence appears to have spread over the electorate. Deep economic

WILL ROGERS SAYS:

SANTA MONICA, Nov. 7. (To the Editor of The Register:) Well, I'm like Mr. Coolidge, you ain't going to get me taking sides in this election. I am going to write about aviation. Aviation will save this country some day and I know no politician is going to do it. Wish we could get our Presidential candidates to travel by plane, but there is no back platform to make the speeches from, and there is no plane big enough to carry all their "yes" men. Had a great night flight from Fort Worth to Los Angeles. Night flying is smoother, cooler and the real time saver, and becoming very popular on the lines. Back home after 21,000 miles. Through twenty countries. All big three-motored American planes, all American pilots and co-pilots, a radio operator, in touch with Miami, or Brownville, Tex., every minute, and a steward to feed you.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

ers made today by the various candidates in the county with the exception of the Congressional candidates, whose statements are to be found elsewhere in The Register.

Senator N. T. Edwards of Orange, candidate of the Republican ticket to succeed himself as state senator from this district, issued the following statement today:

"As the campaign closes, I desire to renew to the people of Orange county the pledge I made four years ago—that I would serve them to the best of my ability and that my efforts would be directed to advance their interests."

State Senate

"I went to the state senate four years ago with three special objects in view. To establish equality between Northern and Southern California in the matter of roads in the secondary highway system, to secure for Orange county its proper representation in the state assembly, and to secure a congressional district in which this county would have its interests properly safeguarded. With the help of Assemblyman Craig, these purposes were accomplished."

"I have stood steadily for economy, for high standards of morality and for justice to all classes of our citizens. I believe my record has been sound and constructive and I submit it with ready confidence to the voters of Orange county."

David G. Wetlin, well known attorney who is a candidate for state senator on the Democratic ticket, today expressed confidence that the entire Democratic ticket will be successful at the election tomorrow, including all local candidates.

Frank Harwood, Democratic nominee for state assemblyman from this district, declared that "things certainly look very good" for the Democratic slate this year. "It looks like a complete Democratic victory," he asserted. He renewed his pledges to represent this district in the state assembly if elected tomorrow.

State Assembly

James B. Utt, candidate on the Republican ticket for state assemblyman, made the following statement: "I am glad to have been Republican nominee for this district for state assemblyman. I believe the campaign has been carried on in a clean and dignified manner. I am confident of success but no matter how the election tomorrow comes out, I can be counted on to support the choice of the people."

Expressing confidence in the election of Charles D. Vau Wyk to the office of supervisor from the first district, Joe S. Mitcheer, well known real estate counselor and appraiser, who has been active in coordinating the efforts of the Van Wyk supporters, said: "We have every reason to believe that victory will be ours by a comfortable margin. The thousands of new voters that will be drawn to the polls only by the presidential contest, are an unknown quantity to some extent, and make it difficult to give an estimate in figures. Those working in the interests of Van Wyk, have been thrice as active as the others in the past few days."

William C. Jerome, former county auditor, who is a candidate for election as supervisor in the first district, made the following statement:

"I appreciate very much the courtesy of The Register in giving me this opportunity for a last word to the voters prior to tomorrow's election."

"First I want to correct a wrong impression. In Saturday's Register in an ad appeared the endorsement of two men along with others, Mr. Paul Cannady's name was mispelled Caseday and the name of William Majors would in no way be confused with E. R. Majors, secretary of the E. R. Majors lodge. Mr. Majors to my knowledge has never expressed a preference nor has he ever been asked to do so either by my opponent or by myself, who are both members of the order."

First District

"I want to assure the voters of the district that I appreciate very much the fine support they are giving my candidacy. I have attempted to make a clean, aggressive campaign in which I have made no foolish promises. I will be able to enter upon the duties of supervisor free and unembarrassed. I will have no enemies to punish and no special friends to serve. I will be in a position to give the best that I can in me in the service of the people."

"To the wonderful group of friends who have so ably and unselfishly put over this campaign for me I can only say thank you. I hope to merit your approval and in a measure pay you for your devotion by giving my best for my district and the county as a whole."

Robert Ramsey, Democratic nominee for the state assembly from the 75th district, was enthusiastic today in predicting a clean sweep for the Democratic party at the election tomorrow, including all local candidates as well as national candidates. "I have pledged myself," he declared, "to do my utmost to restore the confidence of the people of the state in the state government and to make an investigation of the Ralph administration. I am not obligated to the governor in any manner, and I pledge my opposition to this investigation."

Edward T. (Ted) Craig, candidate to succeed himself as state assemblyman from the 75th district on the Republican ticket, today issued a public acknowledgement of thanks for the efforts of his supporters during the campaign which is ending and pledged himself to carry on his efforts in behalf of the citizens of the district and the state if he is again chosen to be the district representative in the state legislature.

Third District

LeRoy Lyon, candidate for supervisor in the third district in the northern part of Orange county, today made the following statement:

"Your support at the polls tomorrow will be greatly appreciated. If I am elected supervisor of the third district, my first effort will be your efforts and to the interest of the third district. It will be my constant aim to give you fearless, honest and diligent representation to the end that more business and less politics will prevail at the county courthouse."

William Schumacher, candidate to succeed himself as supervisor from the third district, concluded his extensive campaign in the northern part of the county Saturday. He expressed his appreciation, today, however, for the efforts of his many supporters who have worked in his behalf during the campaign.

FORTY MILLION VOTES WILL BE CAST TUESDAY

questions, which come down to stark elementary matters of food and shelter for wives and children, have made ironical many of the usual circus trappings of presidential campaigns. Twenty minor parties have put candidates in the field, and the socialist presidential candidate, Norman Thomas, has been greeted everywhere by larger crowds than his hitherto ill-fated party has been able to muster in the past.

This tense, anxious feeling, which already in primary elections has turned politics upside down in some places, turned down the LaFollette in Wisconsin for instance, converged most sharply on the two chief figures of the depression election—Hoover and Roosevelt.

They have dominated this campaign and its every phase more completely than candidates usually do. Roosevelt overruled his advisers and took the Pacific Coast trip anyway. Mr. Hoover originally was advised to follow his 1928 strategy and make only a few major speeches. He saw the election strength was greater than had been anticipated and he struck out on his own in the most aggressive campaign any recent president has conducted.

As the campaign neared its finish, President Hoover became more direct in his attacks, mentioning Roosevelt directly, answering personal campaign whippers about himself, declaring that election of Roosevelt would be a serious blow to economic recovery.

Roosevelt started his pre-convention campaign with an outburst about the "forgotten man" which brought down strong denunciation and the charge of "demagoguery" from Alfred E. Smith and many others. As his campaign has progressed he has been increasingly sparing of making promises—with the result that many critics said his speeches lacked substance.

Faced with the claim that his economic policies were visionary, Governor Roosevelt met the charge through the support of Owen D. Young, one of America's best known men of business, who came to the front to support him.

The President then will be taken along Palm drive, which will be lined with school children, to the Stanford arch, where the formal welcome to the campus, as an alumnus, trustee and the nation's executive, will take place.

After those ceremonies, the President will be escorted to his Stanford university home atop San Juan hill, and later, accompanied by Mrs. Hoover, he will eat his breakfast at Precinct 1 in the Stanford Women's club.

DRY LEADERS ASK WORKERS FOR ELECTION

Dry voters are urged to vote early tomorrow, it was announced today by the Rev. C. D. Hicks, head of the Santa Ana strategy board. "Every dry vote that is not cast before 2 o'clock will add to the task of the workers, for they have set themselves the goal of bringing out every dry vote in the Santa Ana polling districts," he said. "The city has been canvassed, and the sentiments are pretty generally known, and it is the intention of the dry workers to call for every dry vote that has not been cast up to the early part of the afternoon."

"Workers are greatly needed for service tomorrow. It will take 300 men and women to care for the task to be done. This means a checker at each precinct polling place, and one or two workers to explain to voters how to mark their ballots in support of the Wright law. Many have already volunteered, but more are needed. 'Any who are willing to help are requested to make it known this evening, or early tomorrow morning, to the Board of Strategy. Telephone the residence of C. D. Hicks, 2311 W. or call the Y. M. C. A., phone 96, or Roy Fowler, phone 419, and give name and address, and state at what time you will be able to serve. Workers are assigned to their own polling places, so far as possible, and hours are being arranged to meet convenience of those who can work only part of the day."

"We expect a heavy vote in favor of the Wright law in Orange county, but we must make our majority just as large as possible in order to meet the challenge of other sections which are not so much concerned about saving the situation. We are counting on the faithful people of Santa Ana to help us see this matter through to a successful conclusion."

Midway W.C.T.U. Holds Program

MIDWAY CITY, Nov. 7.—An interesting talk on the recent state W. C. T. U. convention was given at the Midway City W. C. T. U. meeting by Miss Emily Cox of Santa Ana. The devotional exercises were conducted by the Rev. John J. Woodson, pastor of the local Nazarene church.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tenney Wilson, at whose home the meeting was held, gave interesting features on three well known musical numbers which were sung.

Plans for a Christmas party for the local organization were made. A pot luck dinner will be served at this "old fashioned" party.

Ten were present, the Rev. and Mrs. John J. Woodson, Miss Emily Cox, Mrs. F. L. Florey, Mrs. W. E. Moore, Mrs. Blomacher, Miss Marjorie Byram, Mrs. William Walters, Mrs. Lemerish and Mrs. Wilson.

The President grew bitter in his denunciation of the campaign led by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, his Democratic opponent. He charged the Democrats with "building up hate against me personally," and added: "They tried

POLICE SEARCH FOR BODY TO COMPLETE CASE

Armed with shovels, members of the Santa Ana police department are today seeking the body of Francisco Mendez, 22, of Delhi, who has been missing, rather mysteriously, a week today.

Police are working on the theory that he was murdered on Halladay street, where the Pacific Electric tracks cross, in Delhi. Several pools of blood containing human hair were found there, and friends of the man, who have known him for many years, informed the police today that they believed he had been killed.

They pointed to many little things which would refute the theory that the man merely walked away from his everyday life. They think he has been slain.

In the meantime, the police, together with L. J. Nicholson, deputy sheriff, who has been working on the case from the start, continue to hold Jesus Pena, Stanton man, in jail for investigation. There is a woman in the case, one Sylvia Delcy, of Stanton, whom police believe may have been the motive for the disappearance of Mendez. The Delcy woman is not in custody but police officers have had several talks with her. They plan today to start quizzing Pena, who was arrested when he appeared in Stanton with the woman. The woman had been living with Mendez, up to the time he disappeared, officers said.

A number of vacant houses in Delhi have been searched for the body, and officers with spades have dug in several places where they thought they might find the body. Yesterday they were called to a spot south of the Eddie Martin airport, when an odor attracted attention of a person who happened to pass. The spot was dug into, and the remains of a dog were found.

vent war." He said he opposed an economic boycott because it was "a contradiction of method."

Silver Parley

On silver, the president gave assurance to the people of this Rocky Mountain mining region that their interests would be advanced by the American delegation at the proposed world economic conference at London.

He said: "I shall appoint a representative on the American delegation who will carry your point of view to that conference. I call your attention to the fact that in 30 years this is the only administration which has won for you the consideration of this question by the nations of the world."

Mr. Hoover emphasized that he had sounded out the foreign countries on a silver conference, but that they had turned him down. He said then his administration went into the world economic parley only on the definite understanding that there should be considered "a method for the restoration of the use and price of silver."

The president read his statement on Philippine independence and a tariff on sugar, issued in Denver last night, and defended his protective tariff policy. He said the tariff commission had "taken the tariff out of log rolling and placed it on a sound and effective basis, and in this connection paid the following tribute to Senator Smoot of Utah:

"Senator Smoot of your state led not only in his fight but also in the fight for the protection of your industries in Utah and for the protection of the entire nation."

The President grew bitter in his denunciation of the campaign led by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, his Democratic opponent. He charged the Democrats with "building up hate against me personally," and added: "They tried by misleading to find some way to place on the Republican party the responsibility for this depression, and by building up hate against me personally, to add a protest vote against the Republican party. That was making politics out of human misery."

Forecasts Victory

The chief executive forecast a Republican victory and attacking the Democrats, said: "Their failure will be the rebuke of an honest minded and thinking electorate."

He again declared that 1,000,000 men had been put back to work since Congress adjourned, and 500,000 were returning monthly. The President reiterated his denunciation of the Democrat House of Representatives which he charged was guilty of delaying passage of measures designed to end the depression.

The president declared business conditions generally were improving, reports to him showed. He said also he had "just received a telegram showing employment and business in New England increased ten percent in the past four months." The president said he regretted "that agriculture has been lagging behind industry in this march of recovery." He blamed that largely on decreased currencies abroad which he said permitted dumping of farm produce on American markets, and promised farm relief.

He said the depreciation of currencies "has created breaches in the protective tariff wall which protected our people. Our first duty now is to repair this breach in order that agriculture may march forward with industry."

The chief executive charged Gov. Roosevelt's advisors had given him opponent false advice and misled him. He said:

"One of the misrepresentations has been as to my position as to silver. If I had no broader vision than my personal sympathy with every man who works with pick and shovel, every superintendent and every owner of a mine, I would be anxious that their product could be salable at a price which would maintain their livelihood and the prosperity of the state."

Foreign Affairs

"Increase in the volume of silver would relieve us from strains of cheap production of goods which flow over our borders. It would rehabilitate the buying power of many foreign nations for our goods. We have long since determined that there can be but one standard of monetary value. But yet we should restore silver to greater use for subsidiary coinage and other purposes without undermining the gold standard. It thus becomes a problem which cannot be solved without international action."

The president, turning to foreign affairs, denounced war as a national policy, but admitted: "There are issues which it is right that men, if need be, should sacrifice their lives to defend them."

He outlined his personal experience during and after the World war in Europe and said: "All these experiences have impressed upon my mind with ineradicable vividness the colossal error of war as an instrument of national policy. I have learned the futility of war as a solvent of great human problems."

"I see in wars the loss of the glorious young manhood of the world. I see wars in terms of women, widowed or unwed, with fond hopes blasted, of homes wrecked and in homes that never even had their chance of being. I see in wars fatal poison subtly invading the moral ideals of the people. The world has seen enough of a post war peace that is not peace, but rather smoulders of racial hatreds."

Former City Trustee Says Civic League Endorsement Looks Very Queer To Him

To Voters of My City—The so-called endorsement given by the so-called Civic League to the candidacy of Mr. Van Wyk for supervisor arouses me tremendously.

On several occasions, believing in its announced principles, I have lent my personal and financial support to this so-called league, but I have never known of an active civic organization. I have lived here for 25 years. I served this city as a city trustee, and as a citizen much interested in the city's welfare. I at this time feel justified in questioning the reliability and sincerity of this so-called league and its endorsement as given to the public at the late hour of last Saturday by Wayne Goble, who calls himself secretary of this league.

Though I have contributed to this league—but never again!—I have never been called to any meeting of the league. Who are its members? Who are its officers? I am convinced that it is a one-man affair, designed to further the interests of persons chosen by Mr. Goble for whatever reasons he Mr. Goble alone may have for making his selections.

It seems to me utterly absurd for this community to have foisted upon it an imposition such as Mr. Goble handed to us in the article presented to him and published conspicuously by the Register Saturday night.

FORMER STATE SENATOR EDEN ANSWERS CALL

Walter Eden, former state assemblyman and later state senator from this district, passed away at his home in Los Angeles Saturday. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from Pierce Brothers' chapel in Los Angeles.

Mr. Eden came to Santa Ana in 1912 and was the first title officer employed by the Orange County Title company. He later was district deputy attorney under L. A. West. He also practiced law in Santa Ana before moving to Los Angeles.

As a Republican in politics he was elected in November, 1919, to the state assembly and one of his important positions was that of chairman of the committee on rules. Among measures proposed by him was the law giving tidelands to Newport Beach, and those outside the corporation to Orange county; he also helped to ratify the prohibition amendment and the woman's suffrage amendment.

While in Santa Ana Mr. Eden was exalted ruler of the Elks lodge for two terms, 1921-1922. At Tacoma, Wash., in June, 1910, Mr. Eden was married to Miss Margaret Fitzgerald.

BOTH LEADERS IN PREDICTION OF BIG VICTORY

With political campaigns for the most part closed today, the following statements were made by Howard Irwin of Fullerton, chairman of the Republican county central committee, and Judge J. G. Mitchell, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, regarding the election tomorrow.

"The national ticket," Irwin declared, "so far as Orange county is concerned, will be a Republican landslide. Without question of a doubt, so far as the state ticket is concerned, there is no doubt as to the outcome for candidates. The United States senatorial race is the only doubtful issue. It is our impression that there is a very definite trend to Hoover which will swing the country for him and we actually expect him to be elected."

Judge Mitchell said, "In my judgment it is all over but the shouting. Voters of the great United States will elect Franklin Roosevelt by the greatest majority ever accorded a president of the United States because he can and will put the nation on a sound basis." Judge Mitchell also predicted a sweeping victory for all local Democratic candidates.

OFFICERS ASK SUPPORT OF WRIGHT LAW

"With the passage of the Wright Law, California served notice on the world that she is loyal to the Constitution of the United States, and that she proposes to support it in every detail, carrying her share of the responsibility in the sisterhood of states," said Sheriff Logan Jackson at a mass meeting of dry workers at the Baptist church last night.

"To repeal the Wright law, as proposed in Tuesday's election, will be to announce our withdrawal from co-operation with the government. It will mean that we are prepared to turn our highways into race tracks for drunken drivers. It will render helpless in the regulation of liquor traffic all the peace officers in Orange county. A bootlegger can haul his truck loads of liquor along Main street, and your officers will be unable to lay a hand on him unless he violates some law or ordinance other than those relating to liquor. When you vote 'no' on Proposition No. 1 on Tuesday, you will be voting to sustain the Constitution of the United States, and to make and keep California safe for its people."

The meeting, which attracted a large attendance, was conducted by the Rev. C. D. Hicks, chairman of the Santa Ana Board of Strategy. Judge Kenneth Morrison defined the duties of workers at the polls, and explained what can and cannot be done in the way of electioneering. He related experiences which occur in his daily work and announced in no uncertain terms his conviction that any weakening of the present laws for the control of the liquor situation will be disastrous to our state and county.

"The law is being violated, it is true," he said, "but to remove the restriction will simply open the way for abuses beyond our imagination. It is one thing to restrict the use of liquor by rigid laws, which, while occasionally violated, are still an effective restraint. It is quite another thing to take away the restraining law and render our law enforcement officers powerless to control a situation which is full of danger to every one of us. My daily experience in handling cases of law violation forces me to urge you to vote 'no' on Propositions Nos. 1 and 2."

Dr. George A. Warner, pastor of the First M. E. church, made a stirring appeal for the support of the Wright law and the eighteenth amendment.

"I have lived in cities where the saloon was in power, and I have seen the change since prohibition became our national law," he said.

"In one little town in which I held a pastorate, I found the young people of the town and of my own church holding their social affairs in a room over the corner saloon. The saloon controlled the town, and the only hope was in securing the adoption of a local option ordinance. Anyone who tries to tell you that conditions are worse, or that more liquor is consumed now than when we had licensed liquor traffic is either ignorant or dishonest. I have seen too much of life under both conditions, and I know what I am talking about. Bring back the liquor traffic in any form, and you will bring back the saloon, even though it may be under a different name. And you bring back the saloon or its modern equivalent, you bring back a breeding place for all the corruption, any form, and you will bring back crime and evil that man's mind can invent."

I have many friends in all organizations and in all faiths. I appreciate their support and respect their loyalty to their own ideals and beliefs. But such things are personal, the right of every man and woman, and should not be brought into a political campaign where our economic welfare and tax savings are at stake.

Beware of such rumors. Don't believe them. Intelligent men and women know that such last-minute attempts are groundless and unworthy of any candidate for political office.

Signed,

CHARLES D. VAN WYK.

*We have advised voting "No" upon this proposition. We have done this primarily because Huntington Beach itself voted by a majority vote against the tideland drilling measure.

We were recently shown a large number of cards signed by Huntington Beach residents, and were told that more than 1400 of the 2200-odd registered voters had signed a statement that they favored No. 11. In principle, we would be opposed to drilling on the tidelands. We have felt that the Huntington Beach people should be the determining factor in this respect. We are giving these statements for whatever they may be worth to the voter.

URGES SUPPORT OF PROHIBITION AND WRIGHT ACT

B. Z. McKinney, Santa Ana attorney, spoke to the Men's Community Bible class at its service in the Fox West Coast theater yesterday morning, urging retention of the Wright act by voting "No" on proposition No. 1 on the ballot tomorrow; defeat of the plan to give the state entire control of liquor traffic, by voting "No" on proposition No. 2; and retention of the eighteenth amendment.

"Those seeking repeal of the Wright act are well supplied with funds and are spending large sums for advertising," McKinney said. "They are asking repeal of the Wright act because they say it will mean more jobs and lower taxes. It will mean more jobs for bootleggers, all right, but on the tax side, officers now are collecting fines totaling more than three times the cost of enforcement of the law, from convictions for violation of the law."

Proposition No. 2 he characterized as a vicious and insidious measure, saying it meant if the time should ever come when federal prohibition should be abandoned, the citizens of Santa Ana and Orange county could not determine whether they should remain dry, should No. 2 be passed at the election. He also declared it would permit the consumption of liquor at every eating place and the sale of it in every retail store, which he said would be worse than the old saloon system.

McKinney declared that the man who uses alcohol is a menace to himself, his family and society, and that a drunk man in an auto was more dangerous than a drunk man with a loaded gun in his hand. He quoted figures to show that auto accident fatalities in England, Canada and Germany are much greater proportionately than in the U. S. under prohibition. McKinney also quoted Canadian government figures to show that there had been great increases in crime under the liquor system.

BOTH PARTIES TAKE VOTERS TO POLLS TUESDAY

Both the Democratic and Republican headquarters today had completed arrangements for carrying voters who had no transportation to the polls tomorrow.

For the Republican organization, the Young Men's Republican club has arranged for cars to be furnished by club members to take voters to the polls and to their homes after voting. Anyone desiring to take advantage of this service can do so by calling 2869. It was announced today by Lloyd Banks.

From Democratic campaign headquarters, came an appeal for volunteer workers of every description who are willing to assist in the various precincts and to perform incidental headquarters duties, according to A. D. Comito, local club manager.

All interested in the success of the complete Democratic ticket were urged to report immediately at the headquarters at the corner of Second and Main streets, Comito said.

Complete transportation facilities have been arranged for voters who have no automobiles and anyone desiring the service can notify headquarters at 5494.

A radio installed at the headquarters will be tuned to stations giving complete election returns tomorrow, and it will be operated until results are apparent or conceded, it was announced.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

-- News Behind the News --

WASHINGTON
By Paul Mallon

AL AND ALICE
How highly politicians get at election time is well illustrated by the inside stories of what happened in the gag cases of Al Smith and Princess Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

After Al's Newark sermon on bigotry several complaints were received at New York Democratic headquarters. There were not many but a certain field general flew off the handle. He fixed it immediately to curtail Al's future broadcasting arrangements. Smith was to be confined to the East beginning with the Boston broadcast.

A state chairman out in the Middle West heard about it. He called Chairman Farley on the long distance telephone to ask how come. Farley told him of the few complaints coming mainly from underlings in that Midwestern state.

"Don't be silly," replied the state chairman. "If you cut Al off here you will lose more votes. He hasn't changed our situation any. Let him talk." Orders were changed again and Al's speech went as far as the Middle West.

The Princess Alice affair dates back to an editorial published by her arch social enemy here—Cissie Patterson—insinuating that the only member of American royalty cannot make a speech.

Said Mrs. Patterson: "She cannot utter." Senator Watson issued a call for assistance to the Princess. He asked her to come to Indiana to drum up a crowd of society women.

on so he could address them. It was generally expected Mrs. Longworth would make a speech for the ticket. She confined herself to the drumming.

The charge was broadcast that she was gagged by Senator Watson. Watson's friends explained she had not been called on and denied the charge. At last accounts both sides were still at it with counter charges and rejoinders.

All of which adds to the gaiety if not the intelligence of the campaign.

LUMP
If those two yarns are not conclusive, consider what happened during the Hoover trip to Indianapolis.

A certain Washington correspondent for an Indianapolis Republican newspaper decided on a stunt to help Watson. He interviewed his friends from the press gallery and wrote a big story headed: "Press Gallery All for Watson—Reporters Unanimously Favor Jim's Re-election."

The Democratic State Committee out there wired each reporter quoted and asked if the statements were authorized. Several correspondents denied they had seen the author of the story. Many were connected with Democratic or non-partisan news agencies and were embarrassed. They also denied the quotes.

The upshot was that what was intended as a kindly maneuver for Watson turned out to be a boom-erang which left a lump on his political head.

RELIEF
Worse than that and far more important is the case of the San Francisco bridge. Republicans logically took advantage of the fact that the R. F. C. loaned government money for the bridge.

The local end of California negotiations were handled by Lee Cutler, an old friend of the President. Word got around out there that Mr. Hoover put the thing through and his confidential secretary, Lawrence Richey, was quoted as saying so. That was all right for California but Pennsylvania Democrats got wind of it.

They recollect Mr. Hoover turned down Gov. Pinchot's plea for relief loans saying it would be improper for him to interfere with the R. F. C. They made as much of the bridge matter as they could.

R. F. C.

Gentlemen closer than the key-hole in the board meetings say each R. F. C. session lately has been one political harangue after another. Democrats dominate the board and they did not want to be charged with being traitors to their party. They thought nothing should be done that would have an obvious political effect.

The truth about Mr. Hoover's influence in the bridge matter is that Republican politicians went too far in their claims. White House forces told Cutler how to go about presenting his case. They assisted him in every way. There is no evidence whatever to suggest that Mr. Hoover exerted any personal pressure on any member of the R. F. C.

FRIEND
You will never get a Washington newspaperman to say anything against Mrs. Longworth's foe, Cissie Patterson. As editor of the local Hearst paper she has been the fairy godmothers of unemployed correspondents, hiring them for odd periods despite her depressed budget.

NOTES
It is agreed unanimously that everyone will get a nice clean breath of good fresh air when the campaign is over. Mr. Hoover recently told a friend: "I will never step in an airplane as long as I am President."

The President has done no flying since his war days in London when he flew frequently across the channel. The White House has announced 12 social events for the winter calendar up to February 23 which led to rumors that Mr. Hoover would not retire before March 4 even if defeated. Those who started the rumors forgot that the social calendar is a fixed affair no matter who is President.

BETS
Few are saying with cash that Hoover will win. Leading betting commissioners have been quoting odds freely enough but many who wanted to lay a bet on Roosevelt were unable to get service. Apparently it is all right to have hunches but risking money is something else again.

ROOSEVELT
Local sharps are saying that Roosevelt will have no trouble with his Congress for the simple reason that the Democratic majority will be so large he can afford to ignore the noisy minorities. They cite the analogy of Wilson's 1914 Congress. The Re-

GERMANY
During the recent general shakeup in the German diplomatic service no change was made in the Washington embassy because Germans wish to await the outcome of the U. S. elections. In the event of a Democratic victory they want to be sure the new ambassador will be acceptable to Roosevelt in view of possible complications arising within the next few years over German private debts.

Confidential information indicates that Bernard Baruch is being ing contacted indirectly by Germans as well as consulted directly by Roosevelt on the choice of the next German ambassador.

publican Herald Tribune recently made the editorial concession that the Democrats are certain to control the House.

GLASS
Senator Glass is not exactly popular among bankers but of them are pulling for his nomination to the Treasury post. If Roosevelt wins. They see him as the only watch dog sufficiently aggressive to prevent wholesale inflation. His health may not permit it even if the offer is made.

BANKS
Bank reserves are getting fat enough for a side-show but banks still show no signs of interest in anything but government investments. The privilege of issuing national bank notes has been a big factor. Many banks have been able to pay their debts in this way and others have piled up so much money to their credit that they don't know what to do with it.

An odd angle is that several large New York banks are urging their big depositors to buy securities and are offering funds freely for the purpose.

A New York Federal Reserve official sees as significant the fact that banks outside the big city have at last taken the lead on loans and investments away from New York banks. The earning assets of the latter have increased 697 million dollars since July 20th while outside banks have shown a gain of only $3 million dollars. Last week these items shrank in the New York district by 7 millions while the rest of the country went up by 4 millions. This means a better diffusion of credit.

REAL ESTATE
Apartment rentals in New York City are 40 percent or more below the rates of two years ago. Landlords are making liberal concessions in order to keep their buildings occupied. Informed experts are advising their friends not to sign a lease for more than a year, on the probability that the "rent market" in real estate will be even stronger in the fall of 1933.

SIDELIGHTS
Dudley Field Malone's support of Hoover is said to be due to his close friendship with Jimmy Walker. . . . Normally he is thoroughly radical. . . . The Democrats say this clinches the election because Malone has never been known to be identified with anything but a lost cause. . . . Republicans are making a belated but intensive drive for the Italian vote. . . . Stormy petrel La Guardia will be buried in the Tammany avalanche if inside estimates are correct.

CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES IN FINAL WORDS

Final statements from opposing Congressional candidates, Sam Collins and B. Z. McKinney, were made today as the campaign ends, in which they expressed satisfaction with the campaign, hope for the outcome and thanked workers for their efforts.

Collins, Republican candidate, and his workers tonight conclude nearly six months of vigorous campaigning and the candidate himself and his leaders said they were content to leave the verdict with the voters tomorrow.

Collins spoke Sunday morning before the Men's Brotherhood of his church, the First Christian, of Fullerton. Collins' supporters say he will win by a handsome majority.

"Come what may in this campaign," said Collins, "I am happy to say that, on the eve of election, I have never spoken an ugly or an ill word of my opponent. I had fervently hoped that the campaign would be along recognized political lines, one candidate and his platform against the other candidate and his platform."

"In the announcement of my candidacy, June 23, I stated that I was running as a dry. I stated that I would oppose repeal of the eighteenth amendment. I submit that I have made my position clear on the dry question ever since I announced as a candidate. I said then I was against repeal of the eighteenth amendment. I still am."

"In my initial announcement I said that I favored the retention of the Republican protective tariff. I said I favored a stiff tariff on foreign oil. I said I favored drastic economy. I said I favored exclusion of Filipino laborers. I said I favored legislation to bring about speedy completion of Boulder dam."

"I am the only ex-service man in the congressional race. Although I favor economy, being a taxpayer in both San Bernardino and Orange counties, I do not favor economy at the expense of the veterans."

"An effort has been made at the last minute to make my supporters believe that I would support Orange county over the two counties in the district. I want to remind the voters that all of the district is my home, that I could not favor one county as my 'home' against the other."

"As an orange grower and as a man who has engaged in the fruit business from field to market, I know first hand the necessity of the

Stamps Must Be Used On Ballots

Voters are warned by election officials, on the eve of election, to use care in marking their ballots. This does not refer to selection of candidates but common errors in marking the ballot.

County Clerk J. M. Backs said this morning that the most common error is that voters do not use the equipment provided for marking the ballot. Rubber stamps placed in every voting booth must be used in marking the ballot. Those marked with pencils or other devices will be thrown out.

Backs also pointed out that marking the ballot in the square provided for the electoral college vote does not vote the entire ticket. A cross must be marked in the square next the name of each candidate and amendment voted upon.

protective tariff. The leaders of agriculture in the nineteenth district know it too or else they would not have confined their endorsements to me."

McKinney's Statement
McKinney has been quite active in the campaign and made the following statement as it comes to an end:

"My candidacy for congress goes before voters of the nineteenth district tomorrow," said B. Z. McKinney today, and having presented my case to the best of my ability, I stand ready to abide cheerfully by their decision.

"It is my wish at this time to compliment my opponent upon the clean-cut campaign he has conducted, and to assure him that in the event he is chosen over me I shall be the first, if possible, to offer him my congratulations."

"I have taken issue with his position on those questions which seemed to me pertinent to the campaign, and concerning which the voters had a right to know our respective attitudes. But honest controversy over political issues must not be confused with personal controversy. There has been none of the latter in our campaign, and it is my hope that we can finish the campaign as we began it, friends, regardless of the outcome."

"This closing statement would not be complete without a word of thanks and appreciation for those friends and supporters who have worked so faithfully on my behalf. Modesty permits me to assure them of my confidence that we will win, for if we do win, the credit belongs to them."

"It also is my desire to express here my appreciation of the fairness my candidacy has received from the Santa Ana Register. Although it is a Republican newspaper and has not supported me in the campaign, The Register has been the only daily newspaper in the county to give its readers both sides of the congressional campaign. Whatever fate my candidacy may meet at the polls tomorrow, I shall remember gratefully the just attitude of The Register toward both candidates."

DEMOCRATS IN RALLY HERE FOR MCKINNEY

Bringing to a close one of the most arduous campaigns conducted during the pre-election period, B. Z. McKinney, Democratic nominee for congress from this district addressed some 500 persons in Birch park Saturday afternoon, at a rally in which other Democratic candidates also spoke.

McKinney came home to wind up his campaign and was met here by an enthusiastic citizenry which cheered him time after time as he pointed out various stands he would take if sent to Congress.

His talk was a review of the pertinent questions of the campaign summarizing all of these in a brief and concise manner which was well received by the large audience.

In talking of the tariff, McKinney said that he stood for all the present tariff on citrus and agriculture in California but that he went further than the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, in that he stood for a tariff on oil as high as 85 cents per barrel.

McKinney declared that the congress of the United States was already Democratic and that Maine has sent two more representatives this year, therefore he believed it would be folly to send a Republican to congress at this time, because a Republican could not get what he wanted for his district under a Democratic leadership.

Banking Laws
McKinney declared that he stood for a revision in the nation's banking laws, declaring that never before in the history of the country had the banking business been in such a chaotic condition.

In speaking on veteran legislation, McKinney came out openly against the National Economy League and declared that it was the duty of the government to stand by the veterans and that he would fight for veteran legislation.

A dry, McKinney reiterated his stand on the liquor question, promising to fight for the eighteenth amendment and Volstead act.

McKinney spoke briefly on unemployment. He said he believed that it was the duty of the government to aid the unemployed until such time when this pertinent question was solved one way or another; that he believed that the cause was under-consumption rather than over-production and declared that in his opinion, this was the most dangerous question facing the American public today.

Wettlin Speaks
D. G. Wettlin, Democratic nominee for state senator, addressed the large gathering for a few minutes. Wettlin declared that the state of California should be operated from a financial standpoint just the same as a family works from its budget, and that only the minimum expense for operating the state government should be undertaken at this time. He then scored the present administration for its heavy expenditures, declared that the cost ran heavy due to the fact that state funds were being used by the administration to obtain patronage in the various sections of the state.

Frank Harwood, Democratic nominee for assemblyman from the Seventy-fourth district, declared that Governor Rolph had had turned over to him at the end of the C. C. Young administration $21,000,000 of state money. "All of this has been spent and $6,000,000 more besides," he declared. "The tax payers must pay that deficit," he declared. Due to the political extravagance, conditions in Sacramento are not healthy at this time, he said. "I want to be a member of the committee who will look into all this and find out where these millions have gone," he said.

He stressed the fact that in order to benefit the citizens of California, it was necessary to send to Sacramento the Democratic nominees for state senator and assemblymen who would not be in accord with the present Republican administration.

James L. Davis, prominent Santa Ana attorney, presided at the meeting.

I'm Voting For Van Wyk To Reduce My Taxes

To All Santa Ana Voters:

The question before me is, how can I use my vote tomorrow to reduce my tax bills, and thus help to save myself. It is a serious question to me, and thousands of others.

Extravagance must cease in county government, as well as other branches of government, or the government will finally take the property of all of us, as it has already forced some of us to part with it through tax delinquencies.

County tax delinquency last year was 8 per cent in Orange county and 30 per cent in Imperial county. What will it be in our county THIS year? We must guard against 30 per cent delinquency here.

The reckless expenditure, outrunning our increase in population, cannot be charged to any one man, or any two men. It is due largely to certain dominating interests which have urged extensive so-called "improvements" so they could make money out of the taxpayers, including bond buyers and salesmen, contractors of all kinds, finance men, professional boosters, and real estate men unloading "choice lots" on the confiding "investors," with "all improvements in," and private individuals desiring paved roads up to their homes in every direction.

These groups have been closely associated with our elected officials. They so dovetail in together you cannot tell where the interest of one begins and the other leaves off.

But they join together to make an imposing array to overawe us average and unbenefitted fry to continue the process.

Some of these groups have been milking the public so long that the habit of boosting bond issues, new boulevards—in fact, public expenditure of any kind as long as it comes out of the pocket of the taxpayer—has become so fixed in their minds that they have come to think that increasing the tax burden is actually a virtue.

Of the two candidates who are before us for Supervisor for the Santa Ana district, Charles Van Wyk came into the campaign on a money-saving program before the primaries, and has promised an aggressive fight for tax reduction.

He is surrounded by friends working for his election who will profit by tax-saving, and not by tax-spending. His supporters are those, who will be benefitted by a program of economy.

His opponent was an office holder for sixteen years, and part of the group in office while our taxes were mounting each year by leaps and bounds. He repeatedly campaigned for bond issues and has always stood for those things which would increase our tax payments.

Among the published names of those who profess to want him again elected, there appears to be a preponderance of those who have always urged more tax-spending, and many of whom profited from such a program.

This is not the way of economy and reconstruction. It is the route to greater worries, heavier tax burdens, and bankruptcy. You can't put out a fire by pouring kerosene upon it. You must REDUCE, not add to, the fuel.

Is there any one man who has been more active in producing the very plight we are now in as taxpayers, than the man the money-spending group now is asking us to vote for? He did not go on record as favoring, even with his voice, economy anywhere until his impending defeat jarred a few words loose.

It is really a contest between the taxpayers and the tax-spenders, in the attitude of the two men.

Certainly we should not elect a man who believes that spending more than we can pay is the way to peace and happiness.

To elect a man to public office in a tax-levying body, who thinks "tax-spending" is a synonym for "prosperity" is certainly to give up our reason, fly in the face of Providence, and insure even greater tax burdens.

As I see it, if you want to unload something on the county or public, either in the way of gravel, cement, bonds, stocks, light standards, or subdivisions, don't vote for Van Wyk.

As a taxpayer, I am for him, because the money spending crowd is not. I know it will be easier for him to protect the taxpayer if the "profiters" are against him for election.

He has never been tied to any part of the group which has kept from Santa Ana its share of the gasoline tax, or its part of the interest on delinquent tax payments.

I am for Chas. Van Wyk for Supervisor, because he will not have to desert his supporters to help the taxpayers.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. HEINRICH,

Speaker Cites Necessity Of Keeping 18th Amendment

TRUTH ABOUT CANADA GIVEN IN FULLERTON

FULLERTON, Nov. 7.—The United States has in the 18th amendment the greatest moral achievement in the history of nations, the greatest humanitarian legislation in the history of governments, and the greatest moral and ethical victory in the church of the living God, and after all these years, it stands challenged by liquor forces, and is well on way for repeal, which is the saddest tragedy to befall any nation of the world. Dr. Clifford Gordon said at the Fullerton Christian church yesterday morning in his lecture on "The Noble Experiment."

"Prohibition is not doomed if we could get the truth to the people of the country. The most discouraging thing about the whole situation is that the splendid Christian people are being led to vote for repeal on the basis of tales told them of the improved conditions in Canada and other countries that have government control. I am here to tell you the truth about Canada, and I insist that the Canadian people, people like those of United States who are crying repeal and government control, are disillusioned, and so will you of America be if you permit the terrible backward step."

Dr. Gordon, an Australian, has spent the past 20 years studying the liquor question in the nations of the world. He will speak again tonight at the meeting of the Men's Brotherhood of the church on "Hold Fast, America."

In his discussion yesterday he declared the citizens must awake and "choose whether you will defend American brewers or American babies" and gave statistics, compiled by leading physicians of the death rate of children born to drinking mothers, as double that of those born to non-drinking mothers.

"The same forces, outlaw liquor forces, are behind this repeal cry in United States as were behind it in Canada," Dr. Gordon said. "The same excuses are given, to solve the crime problem, to solve the young people's moral problem, and safeguard youth, and to solve the employment problem."

People Fooled
"The legalized liquor interests fooled the best people of Canada, and there, recently, I took a glimpse of the records since government control has come in. I looked in Ontario, the best prohibition province in Canada, and found that since repeal and government control all classes of crime have increased from 22 to 600 per cent, and that the violations of liquor laws and control of traffic have increased 20 per cent."

"How can a sane man, who knows the old liquor troubles, say bring back those old crime haunts. The legalized liquor traffic will no more respect the laws under government control than they do in Australia, in England, in Canada, and in all other countries. Why make United States government, the people, a party to the legalizing of crime through legalizing liquor sales? You cannot

3 Children Booked For New Movie

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 7.—Three talented children, the three young sons of Mrs. Angela Palma, Ambrose "Buddy" Palma, 8, and his two younger brothers, Dickie, 6, and Bobbie, 3, who have spent the greater part of the past year in this vicinity, leave this week for Hollywood, where all three will have parts in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which the Fox studios are to film. The children took parts in the play "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

"Buddy" Ambrose has been in radio and film work since 3 1/2 years of age. He has spoken over the Shell Happy hour, took part in the opening program of the Olympic games in Los Angeles and spoke before 10,000 people July 4 at Ocean Park on "The Constitution." The young orator spoke this summer before the governor of the state of Washington and at a big Republican rally recently. On Armistice day, when the Olympic stadium is to be officially dedicated, "Buddy" will again be a speaker on the program.

"Buddy" is the mascot of the American Legion post No. 236 of Los Angeles and was taken by the post to the national convention this year. He is especially fond of history and is never happier than when with his history books. "Buddy" has a manager, Bill Dorezzo, of the American Legion post of which he is mascot. He is coached by his mother in his oratory and already has won a scholarship at U. S. C. Dickie Palma has been a pupil in the B-2 class of Westminster this term, while Bobbie and little Bobby and their mother spend all of their vacations and week ends here.

BRIDGE PARTY IS HELD AT NEWPORT

NEWPORT BEACH, Nov. 7.—Seventy people, friends and members of the auxiliary of the local American Legion, met in the Legion hut at Newport Beach recently at the invitation of the past presidents of the auxiliary, who acted as hostesses for the gathering.

Prizes were given out at the close of the bridge games. The first prize for women, an Italian cutwork luncheon cloth and napkins, was won by Mrs. Lila Plintner. An Italian cutwork vanity set was the second prize and was won by Mrs. C. H. Trumpey. Mrs. J. A. Boomer received the low prize, a jar of homemade jam. High score for men was won by George MacLeod, the prize being a leather book cover. The second prize for men was a shaving set, won by Albert Dyckman, and the low prize, a jar of homemade jam, went to C. Carter. Rex Turner received the door prize, a handpainted cookie jar filled with cookies; George Fink, who was tied with Turner, receiving as a consolation, a package of cookies. Tasty refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Iris Woolard, Mrs. Claire Strone, Mrs. Zelma Hostetler, Mrs. Edith Ellsworth, Mrs. Marie Dyckman, Mrs. Gladys Thompson, Mrs. Evelyn May and Mrs. Violet Webster.

overcome crime by bringing in more crime.

Then, Ontario is predominantly British. Conditions in United States would be worse, with the conglomeration of races.
Outrageous Argument
"Bring it back to safeguard youth is outrageous argument. Records of the government, records and sentiment of countries where liquor is sold, legally, show conditions of youth before prohibition, as concerns student drinking, were worse than now, and that conditions in countries where liquor sales are legal now are as much or more of a problem than they are here."

He brought report after report from wet New Zealand, from wet Canada, and from wet Australia, showing that the drinking problem in those countries, among college youth, and high school youth, particularly women, is outstanding, and said that in Canada, "after four years of government control, young people are developing the liquor habit to a distressing degree and people are concerned as to how it will end."

TALK ON WORLD CONDITIONS IS GIVEN AT MESA

COSTA MESA, Nov. 7.—A delightfully interesting talk was given by Mrs. E. E. Smith, Orange county club president, before the Friday Afternoon club, November 4, to a group of 65 women.

Mrs. Smith spoke of a Sherwood Eddy seminar taken last summer when she visited various parts of Europe, Economic and world problems were studied by this group. Leading economic leaders seemed to be baffled by existing conditions and could offer no tangible remedy, but spiritual leaders throughout the old world offered hope, in that a revival is expected, and as men's hearts are changed, then world wide strife, confusion and chaos will be eliminated, said the speaker.

Most leaders throughout the trip admitted the greatest cause of all troubles was the World war and failure to heed the sermon on the mount, Mrs. Smith said. Germany torn with political differences and in a pitiful condition was cited as a possible picture of the world when inward conflict is allowed to run riot, Russia with its 160,000,000 millions of people and covering one-sixth of the world's territory, trying to establish a new order of government and life was described.

Mrs. Smith was introduced by Mrs. L. R. Daughenbaugh, program chairman. Mrs. Gray S. Brown spoke of the work of the Goodwill Industries of Orange county and urged that nothing be destroyed, however, small, as it can be used to advantage by the Goodwill workers. Things of no use to local groups can be utilized at the Goodwill plant, located at 2138 North Main street, Santa Ana, she stated.

Helen Fulton, accompanied by Harriet Abrams at the piano, sang "Spring is a Lovely Lady" and "Bon Jour Mabelle."

A luncheon was served at noon under the direction of the secretary, with Mrs. R. Stedman in charge.

The following delegates to the recent county clubs' convention held at Placentia gave reports: Mesdames C. G. Huston, S. L. Bean, R. G. Roberts and L. R. Daughenbaugh.

H. B. Firemen Seek Toys For Christmas

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 7.—City firemen have a toy shop all their own at central fire station in city hall. Tall doll chairs, dolls, jack-in-the-box, a tricycle for some little boy, which fairly glitters with newness, trucks, toy autos, fire engines, all toys that were once before, but later were discarded and finally found their way back to the firemen's toyshop, now all are being boxed and labeled for the community Christmas under the auspices of the firemen with other civic organizations aiding the work.

Right now the firemen are almost out of old toys to work on. Two hundred or more toys are needed this Christmas which provides for taking a toy to every child in the city that Santa Claus might miss if the firemen did not help him.

PROGRAM HELD BY FULLERTON EBELL MEMBERS

FULLERTON, Nov. 7.—Fullerton Ebell club enjoyed a luncheon and program at the clubhouse Friday.

Forty attended the luncheon, where Mrs. Evans reported on the joint welfare meeting of Fullerton organizations the night previous and urged members to give generously this winter for the community center. Mrs. A. W. Chaffee, Mrs. G. H. Sattler, president, and Mrs. A. M. Edwards presented the reports, and Mrs. Gertrude D. Gelder complimented Mrs. Albert Launer, president of Southern District Federation of clubs.

After presenting current aspects of world problems, Mrs. Albert Williams Vasey, Long Beach, suggested that November 9 will not find all the problems of America settled, for our country has been 15 years getting to the present status, and the ills are not to be cured with one election.

Mrs. Vasey was introduced by Mrs. A. M. Edwards, program chairman, who also introduced Mrs. C. A. Anderson, a guest from Concordia, Kans., who sang three numbers with Mrs. Edwards accompanying at the piano.

Hostesses for the day were Mrs. Alma Waston, Mrs. John Craig, Mrs. O. H. Clumer, Mrs. Roy Davis, Mrs. Ashley Doss, Miss Gertrude De Gelder, Mrs. W. W. De Lan, Mrs. J. P. Les Granges and Mrs. J. R. Eberhart.

Delegates appointed for the Southern District convention at Mrs. Ashley Doss, Miss Gertrude Doss, Mrs. George Sherwood, Mrs. Irene Jarvis and the president, delegate ex-officio. Alternates are Mrs. O. M. Thompson, Mrs. H. H. Crooke and Mrs. Henry Kroeger. Other business included reports and announcements of chairmen of committees and section heads. Mrs. George Sherwood and a committee will decorate a car for the Armistice day parade.

Next meeting will be November 18, when tax problems will be discussed.

This Looks Like Win By Both Parties

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 7.—Huntington Beach is going Republican as usual, T. B. Talbert, Republican committeeman of this city said today. "Hoover will carry the city and will swing with him every Republican candidate. I trust the nation will go as Huntington Beach goes," Talbert declared.

"Well it will be nice to see the Democrats carry Huntington Beach at the election tomorrow," said W. D. Huston, Democratic committeeman for this city. "Roosevelt will get a big majority over Hoover here and McAdoo will know Tubbs under. McKinney is taking the city with him to his victory in the congressional race and watch Ramsey and Dave Wetlin carry Huntington Beach for the state senate and house."

This city has the largest registration for 12 years, over 2200 being registered. Aside from the interest in the candidates, there is a keen interest here in Proposition No. 11, the tide land grant amendment to be voted on tomorrow.

Mrs. Fred Dukes Hostess at Party

GARDEN GROVE, Nov. 7.—Mrs. Fred Dukes entertained with a birthday party recently in honor of her little daughter Barbara, on her sixth birthday anniversary.

Mrs. Dukes was assisted by her mother, Mrs. W. G. Rice, of Santa Ana, in entertaining the group with various games.

A 5 o'clock dinner was served at a talk centered with a birthday cake decorated with six tiny pink candles and animal cookies. The place cards were in the form of animals made of prunes and raisins.

Those present besides the honoree were Alma Gene Schorr, Winifred Chaffey, Carol Gorman, Lois and Buddy Maureham, Ralph Stuck and Kenneth Stuck.

LYON IN LAST CAMPAIGN TALK AT LA HABRA

LA HABRA, Nov. 7.—With his charges of the handling of county affairs through the board of supervisors and of the loss of enormous funds to third district because of poor business methods of the board, still unchallenged by the incumbent, William Schumacher, who has been in office 20 years, LeRoy Lyon, candidate for the office, delivered his last talk before election to a crowd of voters at La Habra Saturday night.

He re-stated his stand on affairs and said he not only would plan to handle affairs in a business like way, but would handle all business in the open, instead of through huddles of the officials as the present incumbent, Lyon declared, in telling of the many things that have been falsely said about him, including charges of being 'bought' by outside influences to give water away, and other charges.

Herb Oelke, John Kellenberger and W. J. Carmichael, who ran with Lyon and Schumacher in the primary election spoke for Lyon, urging his support and telling how the same tales that are circulated about Lyon were circulated about them when they were running.

Carmichael was particularly critical of the press of the third district, and said a newspaper man told him the editors agreed to back the incumbent at a meeting held at McFarland's cafe some time ago.

Lyon told again how the printing of the delinquent tax list cost the county taxpayers more than $8,000.

Special Car Brings Note From Rolph

HUNTINGTON BEACH, Nov. 7.—Governor James Rolph sent a lengthy letter to Mayor Elson G. Conrad by state police, the missive arriving at 5 o'clock Saturday morning. The letter discussed Proposition No. 11 on the ballot and expressed the governor's opposition to that proposed amendment. Governor Rolph stated in the letter that he was giving copies of the letter to newspapers for publication.

The state highway officer informed Mayor Conrad he had driven all night from Sacramento in order to reach here in time for Saturday, as it was expected to be published in Sunday newspapers.

The letter reiterated Governor Rolph's opposition to proposition No. 11, on the ground that it was unfair to the people of California to grant the tidelands to the city.

In commenting on the letter Mayor Conrad said he could not see the urgent need of dispatching a special messenger and a state police patrol car, at an expense of a large sum to the state, when a six-cent stamp would have brought the letter by mail.

VISIT STUDIOS

FULLER PARK, Nov. 7.—Mrs. J. Arthur Miller was one of the group of Fullerton Ebells Arts and Crafts section accepting the invitation of Marie Ekenstam, to visit her studio in Pasadena recently.

Other members enjoying this privilege were Mrs. Gus Leander, Mrs. Evalyn Purdy, Mrs. Max Orkin, Mrs. Edward Canning, Mrs. W. J. Carmichael, Mrs. Adrian King, Mrs. John Craig, Mrs. H. G. Howe and Mrs. Sabra Brown.

four times as much as it cost to print the Riverside county list, and how that was spent in third district, evidently an added incentive for the papers of the district to back the incumbent.

LOIS JOHNSON BECOMES BRIDE C. H. ALEXANDER

YORBA LINDA, Nov. 7.—The wedding of Miss Lois Mary Johnson to Charles Hugh Alexander was solemnized Sunday at 3 o'clock in the morning at the home of the bride's mother with the Rev. Joseph G. Keece, pastor of the Friends church, reading the single ring ceremony in the living room of the home, which was beautifully decorated in baskets of roses and chrysanthemums.

The two stood, unattended, with the bride dressed in a charming white angel skin lace over satin. The dress was enhanced by a corsage of gardenias and chrysanthemums, presents of the bridegroom.

Mrs. J. W. Murray and Mrs. A. B. McDavid, friend of the young couple, assisted in decorating the rooms, and placed in them many beautiful flowers gathered from their own gardens.

Present at the ceremony were the bride's mother, Mrs. Johnson; sisters and brothers, Margaret and John Johnson, and Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Willsey, and son, Merrill Kirke; sister and brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Gregory, and baby daughter, Helen Carol, of Huntington Beach; and the Rev. and Mrs. Keece.

At the reception the bride cut her lovely wedding cake and added it to the dainty refreshments that were served.

Immediately following the reception the young couple left for a short honeymoon from which they will return to reside in Yorba Linda. She was dressed in a suit of brown wool crepe with matching accessories.

Mrs. Alexander was formerly employed as a stenographer at the Lorba Linda Citrus association office. The bridegroom is son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Alexander, of Spokane, Wash., and is a state fire warden, having been stationed at Yorba Linda the past year, and is to direct the state labor camp to be established in Orange county.

News Of The Churches

SERMON SERIES IS CONTINUED BY REV. HATTER

The Rev. W. J. Hatter, pastor of the Church of the Messiah, continued his sermon series on the Apostles' Creed, yesterday using as his topic "Christ" and as his text Matthew 16:16, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

He said in part: "Christ is from the Greek used for the Hebrew word for the Messiah, meaning 'the appointed one,' and thus He is called by those who accepted Him as their Redeemer, the great Deliverer who should save them from their sins. This is another challenge of the Creed, if we say 'I believe in God—and in Jesus Christ' we accept the challenge and must accept Him as our Messiah."

"This belief or expectation of a Messiah was not confined to the Jews but was common to many of the ancient religions and is still extant in several of the religions of today. In fact this desire for a Saviour is so common that it is almost universal and is one of the means given us by God to lead us to the unity of all mankind."

Desire For Savior
"This passion for a savior is divided into two types; first, a desire for someone to do something for man on this earth, for his body, to better his life here, a material salvation; second, a desire for changes in the mind, in the person himself, for a moral betterment, a spiritual salvation. Man always feels at first that his woes are due to things outside himself, the confusion of things around him, later he finds that his joy or sorrow is within himself, material things make little difference to real happiness."

"The four gospels may differ slightly in the story of Christ's life, but nowhere can anyone find a flaw in human character as portrayed by Christ on this earth. Christ adds to the challenge of the Creed His power to draw men unto Him by His faith in them. So by our faith in men we can bring them to Him, and we will do this if we truly believe 'in Jesus Christ.'"

"Christ's disciples asked Him if He were about to establish an earthly kingdom and He told them no, but a heavenly kingdom. Today people in their desire for salvation establish all sorts of movements for the betterment of the world, but without attempting to better the souls of men, without offering them a spiritual salvation. Only by saving men spiritually can we hope to improve their condition permanently and solve the grave problems of the day. Christ said, 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God—and all these things shall be added.'"

Want Material Salvation
"There can be no denial that a desire for a Saviour exists in every heart today, but the majority of people desire a material salvation, a few the spiritual one promised by our Lord. Some think that salvation can come by force, others by money, others by socialism, the common man stands bewildered among all the means of salvation offered to him. But none need be bewildered in his desire for a Saviour if he will but look to Christ who stands firm, who tells us that a Saviour is folly, and that hatred is a waste of time, money, and personality, and that a man's life is not in the value of his possessions. Christ teaches us that there is more to life than pleasure, that giving is better than gain, and that the real secret of life is in service and self-sacrifice, and only thereby can salvation come."

"If we accept the challenge and mean all this when we say, 'I believe in God—and in Jesus Christ' we cannot go far wrong in attaining salvation for ourselves and others."

Brethren To Observe Dad, Son Week

Father and Son week is being fittingly observed this week at the Church of the Brethren, Ross and Camille streets with the main event being a Fathers and Sons banquet to be held on Thursday evening, November 10 at 7:30. Together with the good eats for the occasion there will be a good program of musical numbers and other things that the men and boys enjoy and the main feature of the program will be an appropriate address by Rev. Grover Ralston, pastor of the Garden Grove M. E. church. This banquet is sponsored by the Men's Brotherhood of the church of which the following were elected as officers at a recent meeting: President, John E. Baker; vice president, A. Ray Teter, and secretary-treasurer, Paul Teter.

In harmony with a program of the denomination the men of the church are in a drive to increase the attendance of men in the regular church services.

PRESBYTERIANS TO CELEBRATE 50TH BIRTHDAY

The First Presbyterian church of Santa Ana will be 50 years old on November 13. The anniversary is to be the occasion of a general celebration in which the entire membership of this church is to participate, according to the Rev. O. Scott McFarland, pastor, who has been engaged for weeks with his committees in laying plans for the semi-centennial.

The church was organized on November 19, 1882, with 13 charter members. Its history from that day to the present, with its 1417 members and its great program of work, will be reviewed, with illustrations, by Harry W. Lewis, who has gathered data on the subject from all sources, and who is to present his findings at a "family dinner" to be held at the church on Wednesday evening, November 16, at 6:30. The program which is to follow the dinner will include old time musical selections, reminiscences, and the historical sketch by Lewis. Reservations for this dinner must be made not later than November 12.

On Sunday, November 20, the entire day will be given over to the anniversary observance. At the morning service at eleven o'clock, Dr. William E. Roberts, of Los Angeles, a former pastor, will be the preacher. At the evening service on that day, the history of the church will be portrayed in a pageant "Through the Years," which is now being prepared by a group of the young people who will impersonate scenes of the past.

There are many people now living in Santa Ana who have been familiar with the history of this church through all its years, and who will wish to share with its members in the anniversary. The church extends an invitation to all friends of the congregation who will be welcomed at all of the special services.

Christian Science

"Adam and Fallen Man" was the subject of the lesson-sermon yesterday at the Santa Ana First Church of Christ, Scientist. The Golden Text presented Jesus' words, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh and which is born of the Spirit is spirit." One of the Scriptural citations in the lesson-sermon included these verses from the Gospel of John: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."

A correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, stated: "Jesus beheld in science the perfect man, who appeared to him where slaying mortal man appears to mortals. In this perfect man the Saviour saw God's own likeness, and this correct view of man healed the sick. Thus Jesus taught that the

START SERIES OF TALKS ON REVELATIONS

The first of a series of 14 messages from the Book of Revelation was delivered yesterday morning at the First Church of the Brethren. He took the text for his sermon from Revelation 22:3, "The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and our children forever."

He said in part: "Perhaps the vast majority of Christian folks look upon the Book of Revelation as a closed book, but the name of the book itself is against that position. Revelation meant to unveil or uncover and the book is said to be the revelation of Jesus Christ. It has to do with the chain of events leading up to the taking over of all that the Lord purchased by His blood on Calvary's cross."

"Genesis is the book of Beginnings and Revelation may well be said to be the book of Endings. The beginning of sin and death and a record of Paradise Lost is recorded in Genesis and Revelation we have the end of sin and death and Paradise Restored. In the whole Bible exclusive of Revelation we have the origin of the nations, the Hebrew nation called out in Abraham and the Church of God at Pentecost. In Revelation we have the Church with Christ in glory, the judgment of God on the Hebrew people and their final triumph in kingdom blessing and then God dealing with the Gentile nations, just the reverse order."

"The book is divinely divided in the book itself when the command to John was to 'write, the things which thou hast seen, and the things that are and the things that shall be hereafter Rev. 1:19."

"By following this divine order we find perfect harmony both with Revelation and with history for Revelation is only history pre-written. The book is full of symbols to be sure but the Lord has not left us to work out a cross-word puzzle but has Himself either in the book itself or in some other portion of the word explained the significance of the symbols he uses. The book is full of the number seven, it being used at least 53 times, it is the Scriptural number of completeness and Revelation is the book of completion we might well expect to find it so. A blessing is promised to the 'one who reads and they that hear the words of this prophecy' something that is directly said of no other book in the Bible and yet it is the one book the majority do not read."

"Jesus Christ is recognized in the salvation of the book as the Prophet, Priest and King but the book deals in the major portion with Him as the King for it is when 'He takes to Him His power and reigns' that the book has to do."

"It declares in the very beginning that He is coming back and that 'every eye shall see Him' and it is in view of this solemn fact that the people are exhorted to accept the peace made for them on Calvary."

"Finally we note that the close of the book leaves nothing to be desired by those who love the Lord. Satan together with all the evil that emanates from him has been eternally subdued and righteousness reigns supreme. God is now all and in all and to Him all glory and praise ascend."

Damages Sought In Court Action

Helen Wright and R. D. Epperly, owners of a truck damaged in a collision with another truck in the Imperial Valley, have filed a suit in superior court seeking damages totaling $1500. John Calkins is named defendant in the action.

According to their complaint H. L. Daniels was driving the truck owned by Mrs. Wright and Epperly at the time of the collision. The accident happened July 27 last, near Oasis, between Indio and Westmoreland.

The complaint alleges that Calkins was driving his truck in a careless manner and allowed it to collide with their machine. Damages sought are: $1200 difference in the value of their truck before and after the crash, and $300 loss sustained during the 15 days their truck was under repairs.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS

When Alacia Sayer's father died ten years previously, her mother continued his French automobile manufactory so successfully that the Europa was now known to be the world's finest motor car and Mrs. Sayer was worth $500,000. She and Alacia, who had had Eastern schooling, lived in the largest house in the Bois de Boulogne, but little Mrs. Sayer, staid, fast little, and middle-aged, was still the Middle-Western American. Alacia was worried because of Alfredo Santini, a dark, sleek and unpleasantly handsome fellow, who was in constant attendance on her mother. Alacia had charge of the special department, which looked after entering the Europa racing models in all the big races, and she was now interested in winning the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo. Rising one morning from a round of Paris night life with the Smedleys, friends just returned from America, Alacia took out for a trial spin an exact model of the Europa. While making 25 miles an hour, she ran into an embankment in avoiding a ramshackle car. When her senses cleared, she was in a ditch in the arms of a handsome young Frenchman, who spoke excellent English. He took her to a telephone and she crossed the room and put her arms around the stocky little yachtsman who was sitting by the fireplace. It was almost on the tip of Alacia's tongue to tell about Armand and the morning's adventure, but something held her back. Instead, she contented herself with a plea for peace.

INSTALLMENT 4

"Look here, Mother!" said Alacia. "Those Smedleys will be landing on us in a few minutes and have something important to talk to you about. You must get up and go to the car. It's a matter of life and death."

"Must you?" she said plaintively. "Alfredo was just teaching me a new step!"

"It's business," said her daughter firmly. "Vitality important business. And it's a private matter." She added, looking hard at Santini's direction.

"Then I suppose it must be done!" said the older woman reluctantly. "Am I in the way?" Santini asked lazily. "Or am I family enough to listen?"

"You are in the way!" replied Alacia quickly before her mother could respond. "Would you mind? There are cigarettes in the library." The boy got to his feet. Unquestionably he was an attractive figure in his too well cut grey lounge suit, and Alacia made a mental note of the watch on his wrist. It had not been there yesterday. On the table lay an empty jeweler's box, and the slight dimple added to the sweetness of Alacia's mood. As soon as the door had shut behind the languid figure, she turned abruptly to her parent.

"Look here, Mother!" she said sharply. "Why did you engage Santini to drive the Europa for us in the big race?"

"Why are you always so mean to him?" countered her mother. "I'm sure he's as nice as can be, and yet you talk to him as if he was a servant—no, worse than that! Hasn't he always acted a perfect gentleman to you?"

"Never mind his social qualifications just now, Mother," said Alacia. "Why did you ask him to drive? Why did you have the racing car turned over to him?"

"Because he's a well-known driver and a particular friend of ours!" her mother retorted. "Why shouldn't he drive? What have you got against his doing it?"

"I—well nothing really," Alacia admitted, "except that the Grand Prix is too important to take any chances about. It's the only big European race we have never won, and I am determined to have that cup in our collection."

"Isn't it far better then, to have someone who's not only a good driver but a friend?" Mrs. Sayer demanded indignantly. "It's curious I never heard until today that Santini is a pro," said her daughter slowly. "And somehow I don't like that fact."

"Nonsense!" snapped Mrs. Sayer, lighting a cigarette with nervous fingers. "You are prejudiced against him for other reasons."

"All right then, I am!" Alacia granted the point. "I don't like him, because I think he's up to you in an undignified position. He's a nobody, he's twenty years younger, and he's a professional dancer—between races, anyhow! I don't like the way he acts with you and I don't think you ought to allow it. And now you give him this job, which will plant you both right in the limelight. Don't you realize that he'll play it up to the limit? He's using you. I hate to say it if you are—well fond of him, but it's true and you ought to realize that before it's too late."

"Too late?" cried Mrs. Sayer. "What do you mean by too late? Before it's too late for me to get a little happiness out of life, I suppose, after all the years I've worked like a dog! And now that I've learned how to live, how to dress, how to act, and got a beau, you start talking about too late! Let me tell you, Alacia, Santini, Alfredo is crazy about me and I enjoy it. I don't intend having it interfered with."

"Mother! Please!" said Alacia distressed. "Please don't think I don't want you to be happy! If you fall in love with someone decent and straight and your own kind, I'd be the last one in the world to object, even if he didn't have a cent to his name. Why even dear old Dad wouldn't begrudge you happiness if he could know. But this boy! Mother if you weren't absolutely blind you could see what he's doing!"

"Alacia, be quiet," Mrs. Sayer stormed. "Santini is not like that. I know better than anyone. Unless you have some definite charge to make against him, you will please say nothing more. Now have you?"

"No," said Alacia miserably, "but I've seen so many like him, I just know, that's all! I think it's a disgrace to have him officially representing us in a big racing event, and I wish to Heaven you'd call him off. As to your personal relations, well, I've warned you. I can't do more, I only hope you don't consider marrying him?"

"Considering it as far as I've got," said her mother in a low tone. "Running around a little with a boy in one thing. Marrying him, well, that's another."

"Has he asked you?"

"Not yet," said her mother. "I haven't let him. But however, that may be the Monte Carlo thing is decided. I can't and I won't cancel his appointment."

There was a little silence. Alacia looked at her mother with troubled eyes, a great wave of pity sweeping her. Mrs. Sayer, for all her startling clothes, her lifted face and her glee, was less genuinely worldly wise than her capable, clear-eyed young daughter, because of the sentimentalized early Victorian era in which she had had her beginnings. Alacia's rather sweetly ridiculous impulse was to shelter and guard her own mother. But how? The difficulties seemed enormous for the moment, but must somehow be faced. Impulsively she crossed the room and put her arms around the stocky little yachtsman who was sitting by the fireplace. It was almost on the tip of Alacia's tongue to tell about Armand and the morning's adventure, but something held her back. Instead, she contented herself with a plea for peace.

"Don't let's quarrel dear!" she begged softly. "After all, you and I must not make each other wretched. Perhaps I'm wrong. Santini can drive if you really wish it, so we'll make the best of that." But Mrs. Sayer would not reply. She sniffed into a scrap of chiffon handkerchief, and turned away and somehow Alacia could not help feeling that this man Santini had usurped the intimacy which had once existed between mother and daughter. Curious that a complete stranger, a rank outsider, a man who scarcely even spoke their language could do this to them!

"I think," said Mrs. Sayer in a muffled voice, "that I hear the Smedleys arriving. Please ask hum—Alacia, even if you don't like their kind of fun!"

It was an hour or more later that Santini, crossing the floor of the now crowded room, approached Alacia with a small envelope in his hand. As usual several stragglers from the American colony had dropped in for free cocktails and the room was blue with smoke and resonant with laughter and the eternal grinding of the gramophone. Santini, moving with easy grace, seemed wholly unaware of the storm which had so recently passed over his head, and he gave her the envelope with a friendly enough smile. It was addressed in an unfamiliar handwriting, but Alacia tore it open with a quick intuition as to from whence it came.

"If you are not sorry, and I did not dream what happened this morning, will you come to the corner of your street at six o'clock?" he had written. "If you regret, and wish it undone, you have only to ignore this, and I will not trouble you. But you will trouble me all ways, because I love you."

ARMAND.
Alacia crushed the note into the palm of her hand and glanced at the clock in agony. It was a quarter past seven!

"When did this come?" she demanded. Santini shrugged.

"About three-thirty, I think!" he said. "The servant gave it to me when I went in to see your mother. I put it in my pocket and we danced, and I forget until just now."

It seemed almost intolerable that it should have been Santini who had kept the message from her! He stood there grinning like a cat, she thought, utterly unaware that his assumption of responsibility had deepened her dislike of him to actual hatred. And then to make matters worse he curved his arm about her.

"Will you dance a little?" he asked. Alacia threw his arm away violently.

"No!" she cried. "No! Let me go, please!" And she turned on her heel, leaving him standing there affronted, his dark eyes gazing after her alight with malice.

The outer hall was empty and so there was no one to remark that she left the house without either hat or coat, the letter still fluttering from her hand. It was a hundred yards to the corner of the Avenue du Bois, and along the dark, deserted tunnel formed by the overhanging trees, Alacia ran like a child, arriving breathless at the appointed place. If by some miracle he had waited! If only he had realized that his message might miscarry or be delayed! Anxiously she peered up and down the dark street with its gleaming traffic but there was no funny, rusty little car parked reassuringly. As far as the eye could see in either direction, there were no pedestrians except a slow-paced gendarme in a big blue cape, and a thin little girl, tottering along on badly worn high heels, a big hat-box on either arm.

After a few minutes the wind pierced her intolerably, and Alacia turned away slowly and headed back to what was known to be the gayest house in Paris.

P-T. A. DELEGATES REAFFIRM STAND ON 18TH AMENDMENT; URGE DEFEAT OF NOS. 1 AND 2

With 125 delegates in attendance, the Fourth District Parent-Teacher association at its monthly session in Tustin Friday reaffirmed its stand in support of the 18th amendment, advised a "No" vote on amendments Nos. 1 and 2 on the ballot next Tuesday and commended city and county authorities on their handling of delinquency cases.

Several inspirational addresses were given during the all day session. Mrs. R. W. Marvin, of Anaheim, president of the association, presided.

"The Challenge of the Public Schools," was the subject of a talk by Arthur Corey, principal of Buena Park schools. Mrs. Pearl Kendall Hess, state and national officer of the Women's Christian Temperance union, spoke on "Liberty Under the Law."

Mrs. Haverly, president of the High School Council of P-T. A. of Los Angeles, city, told of the needs and activities of the upper division association.

Great Challenge
The great challenge to the school is to see that no further advancement in education be blocked because some parent does not understand the problem, Corey declared.

He said the P-T. A. is to be highly commended on its active role in straightening out these problems and deplored that the schools have on them many burdens that should be partly cared for in other activities of life.

Following his talk, he presented the members with a questionnaire urging all to fill it in, and explaining that as result of checking over about 3000 of them being passed to adults in the county it was hoped to glean points on which the public needs particular education on school affairs, and to profit thereby releasing the information, in an effort to clear away obstacles for advancing in educational programs.

Mrs. Hess denounced those who are backing repeal of the 18th amendment as "traitors who make money on human life" and said liberty has been much abused, and that the human and divine laws may be violated, but they cannot be broken without the individual breaking them by breaking himself also.

Wright Act Backed

Mrs. J. D. Campbell, chairman of legislation, urged voting "no" to keep the Wright act, and to vote down No. 2, as well as to vote down the state racing act, No. 5.

The revised committee to investigate communistic penetration in libraries through books as announced by the president included Dr. J. E. Waters, Orange, chairman; Mrs. Gladys Barnett, Newport Beach; Mrs. W. T. Kirvin, Garden Grove; Mrs. E. Kate Rea, Anaheim; and Mrs. Florence Summers, Costa Mesa.

A motion was made and passed revising the stipulations on making student loans, and Mrs. Marvin urged local associations to bear in mind November is student loan month, and to do something to help swell the fund of fourth district.

Charges Husband's Love Cooled Soon

Accusing her husband of ceasing to demonstrate his love for her one week after they were married and declaring that she has become "merely the slave and housekeeper for her husband," Mrs. Emma Salcido has filed suit for divorce from Manuel Salcido. She has also asked that officers of the Santiago Orange Growers association be cited into court to show cause why they should not turn over to her wages due her husband. She is also asking the court to restore to her her maiden name of Emma Castillo.

According to her complaint Salcido ceased to show her any love or to be congenial toward her. She further charged that on October 30 her husband became intoxicated and stayed away from home until 1 o'clock in the morning. The Salcidos were married in Santa Ana on July 12, last, and separated November 2.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, through Amendment No. 11 placed on the ballot by petition of 167,000 voters, is making a neighborly appeal to the people of California to vote YES on ELEVEN.

THE TRUTH

A giant oil corporation straddles the beach at Huntington Beach with a string of producing oil wells. In the enjoyment of private monopoly the wells of this corporation are draining the oil from a vast reservoir underlying the public domain and paying not one cent to the people for the people's oil thus recovered.

Amendment No. 11 would permit the drilling of offset wells for the recovery of the people's oil and the people would reap the profit. Money thus paid into the treasury would materially reduce the taxes of all the people of the state who should own their beaches. No other beach land in any part of the state is affected by Amendment No. 11. It applies solely to the short strip of beach at Huntington Beach already rendered unfit for any other than commercial use.

THE WHOLE TRUTH

An editorial in the Fullerton News-Tribune sums up the issue:

"If Proposition No. 11 on the ballot fails to pass at the November election it will be principally because voters over the state are deceived by the 'save the beaches' blah being promulgated by opponents of the measure.

"There is no beach to save in the area involved in this proposition. It is already devoted to oil drilling."

Only facts have been stated above—not "hokey" on the part of special privilege. Do a neighborly act for a small town and vote

Sugar Beet, Lima Bean and Citrus Men!

You all know what the tariff means to you. You all know that only the Republican party WILL give you the schedules you need.

You all know that only through a Republican House and Senate, the Republican party CAN give you these schedules.

President Hoover's hands will be tied unless he has a working majority in the Senate.

Your course lies plainly marked before you. The Republican Senatorial and Congressional candidates must be elected to avert inestimable disaster to the citrus, sugar beet and bean growers.

Particularly is this true as to the Senate. The Senate today is Democratic by a majority of one. Unless this situation is cured November 8th the next tariff schedules will be reported out by a Democratic Senate Finance Committee.

Every other consideration in the Senatorial race fades into insignificance when compared with the necessity that we

SEEK BETTER PROTECTION OF CHILD HEALTH

Orange county is cooperating with Dr. Giles S. Porter, state director of public health, in a survey for determination of a child health extension program with services at a cost parents can afford to pay, according to Dr. Kenneth Sutherland, county health officer.

According to Dr. Sutherland the survey is under way in Orange county at present. Information gathered here will be presented at the California White House conference on child health and protection to be held November 11 and 12 in San Francisco.

Endorsement of this program by educational circles was seen in the statement of Vlering Kersey, state director of education, Kersey said: "A modern viewpoint in which health is health through constant protection is superior to a curative program. The public needs facts and guidance. Children and the forces which influence their development must be studied before the course of future action can be determined."

In commenting on the survey being conducted in Orange county and other parts of the state Dr. Porter pointed out that in determining the health extension program at the White House conference the following "bill of rights" for children will be combined with the results of the actual surveys:

For every child—(1) Full protection from birth through adolescence, including periodical health examinations and dental examinations and the inclusion of eye, ear, nose, throat, and milk and water. (2) Health instruction and trained teachers and leaders. (3) A school which is safe from hazards, sanitary, properly equipped, lighted and ventilated. (4) A community which recognizes and plans for its needs. (5) For every rural child as satisfactory schooling and health service as for the city child, and an extension to rural families of social, recreational and cultural facilities. (6) Minimum protection through full-time health officials.

STOP COLDS QUICK—in the Dry Stage!

A cold should be treated promptly the first 24 hours. This is why: A cold ordinarily passes through three stages. The Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Once a cold gets beyond the first stage it is far more difficult to relieve.

Relief comes quickly if you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine immediately—because this cold remedy does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels—kills the cold germs and fever in the system—relieves the headache and grippy feeling—tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

No worry about what you're taking when you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Does not upset the stomach or make the head ring. For years Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine has been the stand-by of thousands in the treatment of colds and gripe. You're playing safe when you take this famous cold tablet! The annual meeting of the Jack Fisher chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, to pay tribute to all Gold Star Mothers and Fathers of Orange county will be held Wednesday evening at the Legion clubhouse. It was announced today by chapter officers.

"It is appropriate that with Armistice day so close that Wednesday's meeting, which will be a social affair, should be set aside to honor the mothers and fathers of our comrades who gave their all in the World war," Earl B. DAMAGE SUIT IS ECHO OF FATAL CRASH

The tragic automobile crash in Orange on the night of October 21, which claimed three lives, will be aired in superior court through a damage suit filed Saturday by Mrs. Bessie Leutzinger, mother of one of the boys killed in the crash.

Mrs. Leutzinger has filed a suit demanding a total of $25,325 damages from Ralph Von Eckartzberger, driver of one of the automobiles involved in the crash, and Henry Berg, said to be one of the owners of the car driven by Eckartzberger.

In her complaint Mrs. Leutzinger alleged that her son Mark, 15-year-old Orange High school student, was a passenger in a small automobile driven by Edwin Johnson, another high school boy. Young Johnson, she alleges, was driving his machine south on Main street in Orange in a careful manner at the time of the accident.

She alleges that Von Eckartzberger was driving his larger automobile north on Main street at an unlawful speed and on the wrong side of the street without regard to traffic when the crash occurred.

She is asking $25,000 actual damages for the death of her son and $325 for funeral expenses.

SEEK WORLD'S HARDEST JOB

Presidency Is Known As Man-Killer

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—The toughest job in the world is the presidency of the United States. The man chosen tomorrow to be the leader of 120,000,000 Americans faces a job that is almost literally a man-killer. Yet no man offered a chance at the job ever has turned it down.

Even aside from paralyzing responsibility for the welfare of 120,000,000 people, aside from urgent problems of today, the mere routine of the presidency has piled up to a point where just going through the motions makes the president one of the hardest-working men in the world.

No great industrial corporation would saddle its head with the burdens we pile on the back of the president. Imagine President Myron Taylor of U. S. Steel personally signing requisitions for new pencils, or President Alfred Sloan of General Motors personally entertaining in his office every G-M stockholder who happened to come to Detroit.

Yet that is the kind of service we expect from the president of the United States, who is head of a bigger business than either, a business spending between four and five billions a year, and employing around a million people in civil and military branches.

That is the kind of business we expect our president to run today. And very different it is from the picture George Washington knew, when there were five federal departments with fewer than 200 civil employees.

1,900,000 Laws to Enforce

Of course, Washington was, and the man we elect today will be sworn to enforce the laws. But, Washington did not have 1,900,000 laws to enforce. Today we have, and thousands on thousands more each year.

And the president's duties are constantly increasing. He not only has the regular constitutional duties of enforcing the laws, commanding the army and navy, making treaties and appointments, any one of which is a huge responsibility. But Congress may, and does, create new commissions and bureaus responsible to him which add to the burden. Merely to list these executive commissions and bureaus and their officers takes some 60 pages in the Congressional Directory: the Veterans' Bureau, Shipping Board, Alien Properties Custodian, Tariff Commission, Budget Bureau, Railroad Administration, Interstate Commerce Commission, and the like which are responsible directly to the executive. All the regular cabinet departments make reports to him too, but through the cabinet members.

Cabinet officers have access to the president at any time without regard to the schedule of appointments which is placed before him each morning portioning out every minute of his working day. He must be available to 435 representatives and 96 senators at almost any time.

He must personally sign in a year as many as 50,000 commissions and nominations for postmasterships; he often signs 120 documents a day in addition to his personal mail, which may run from 30 or 40 to 100 letters a day. Plenty of men would call that alone a day's work.

All in Day's Work

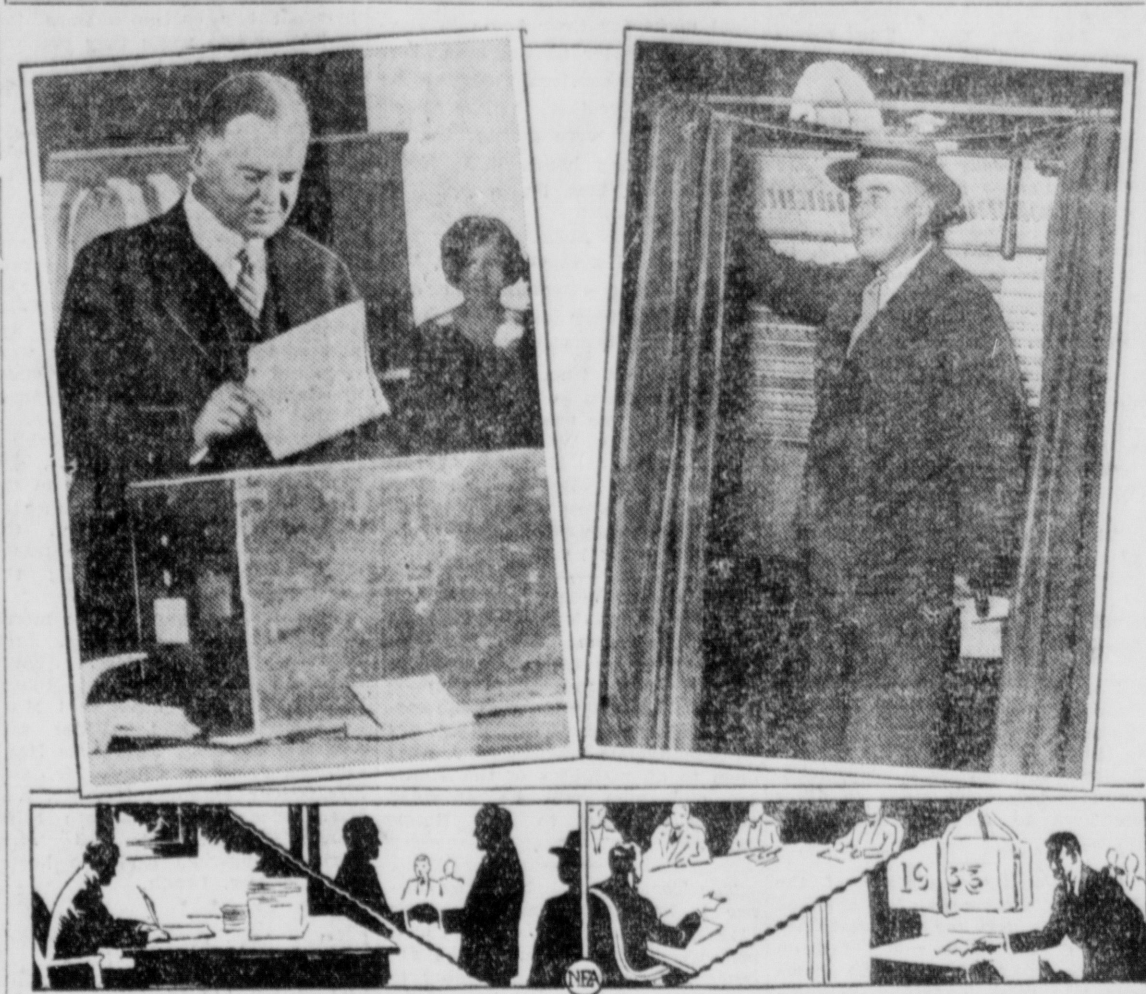

He is required by law to counter-sign the wills of Indians, who are not citizens, but wards of the nation. Until the administration of President Coolidge every federal land grant had to carry his signature. Coolidge balked on this, and empowered Mrs. V. B. Pugh of the Land Grant office to sign his name on these.

The president must preside over cabinet meetings regularly, and hear reports regularly from these officers, and the heads of the executive bureaus and commissions.

Then there are little matters like reviewing troops, laying cornerstones, unveiling monuments, joining lodges, opening conventions, pushing buttons, posing for pictures with delegations, tap-dancers, opera singers, or anybody else an entertaining press agent leads to the White House door. The American president has no Prince of Wales to attend to these matters. Of course, he doesn't have to write the speeches for such

HARD TASK AWAITS WINNER

Even candidates for president cast their votes, which will saddle upon one of them "the toughest job in the world." Here, in pictures taken at previous election, you see President Hoover (left) casting his ballot at Palo Alto, Calif., and Franklin D. Roosevelt at a voting machine in his home precinct at Hyde Park, N. Y. The shadow of four years of signing countless documents, shaking hands with multitudes, presiding at momentous cabinet meetings, laying cornerstones and a thousand other jobs, always hangs over the victor.

Plan Yule Party At Wintersburg

WINTERSBURG, Nov. 7.—Wesleyan Service club members held a clam chowder supper at the Wintersburg Methodist church hall recently. A Christmas party for needy children of the local community up to two years of age was planned. The date for the party has not been set. Plans were made for a handkerchief booth and a fish pond for the Ladies' Aid bazaar December 7.

Miss Mulvane, teacher at Oceanview school, had charge of the study program of the evening, speaking on the subject of the American Indians.

Those present were Miss Zekie Nichols, Miss Geraldine Gardner, Mrs. Marjorie Gardner, Miss Mildred Cantrell, Miss Susan Russell, Miss Isabelle Russell, Miss Hansen, Miss Schoneberg, Miss Ethel Dwyer, Miss Eaton, Miss Bonnelly Fox, Miss June Slater, Miss Donna Stinson, Miss Mulvane and Mrs. W. A. Matson.

And No Privacy

Even in his daily routine he is not spared from this. Every visitor to Washington wants to meet and shake hands with the president. So at noon there is usually a little formal reception when visitors file through the executive offices and grasp the president's hand, sometimes as many as 400 of them.

The people furnish the president a house to live in, but they retain the right to tramp through a great part of it at certain hours. Even when he seeks relaxation he is not alone, for the Secret Service, charged with his safety, has always from three to a dozen men at his heels. President Roosevelt chafed at this constant guard, but the memory of Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley keeps the Secret Service vigilant. Roosevelt himself was shot once by an assassin, following which he never escaped his Secret Service men, again, nor has any president since. The president gets about as much privacy as a canary, and about as much relaxation as a clock spring.

A Killing Job

Many plans have been proposed to take some of the strain from the president, for it has been observed that it is becoming literally a killing job. The fire six presidents averaged 79.6 years of life, the next 10 88.5, and the most recent 10 61.9 years. Yet the life span in general is lengthening. Roosevelt died at his strenuous vitality, died at 61.

The presidency undoubtedly kills.

CHURCH WOMEN SOCIETY THE HOME WEDDINGS FASHIONS HOUSEHOLD.

Father Reads Marriage Service for Daughter And Her Fiance

Heightening the impressive beauty of the marriage service at which Miss Cornelia Bode yesterday became the bride of B. A. Sylvester, was the fact that it was before the lovely bride's own father, the Rev. A. C. Bode, of St. John's Lutheran church, Orange, that the young couple took their wedding vows.

As guests gathered in the church at the appointed hour of 4 o'clock, they were entertained by a recital of sacred music with Eugene Wunderlich at the organ, and also as vocal soloist, complying with the bride's request for "With the Lord Thy Work Begin," her favorite hymn. Following the ceremony, Mr. Wunderlich sang an appropriate bridal number.

The church was made a beautiful scene for an autumn wedding, the rich hues of chrysanthemums creating a blaze of color ranging from pale gold to deep rust and bronze shades. Palms flanked the chancel, and flickering altar candles gleamed amidst their dark green leaves.

As the first strains of Lohengrin's wedding march resounded, the bridal party formed, led by Miss Eugenia Bode, sister of the bride, wearing a blue flat crepe gown with brown slippers and brown velvet hat with tiny veil. Her flowers were chrysanthemums in deep gold and bronze tones.

Miss Alma Bode served her sister as honor maid, and was crowned in primrose yellow flat crepe, wearing lace hat and slim slippers of deep golden brown, and completing her effective appearance with her arm cluster of golden chrysanthemums.

It was the privilege of the Rev. Mr. Bode, not only to read the service uniting his daughter and her fiance in marriage, but also to escort her to the altar. She made a lovely picture as she entered the church on his arm, wearing a creamy satin gown with a long train, its design of the simplest, but including long sleeves which formed full puffs from shoulder to elbow.

Wears Mothers' Flowers
The cap of her double veil was caught by small clusters of orange blossoms and myrtle which adorned the wedding veil of her mother as a bride 35 years ago. She wore her bridegroom's gift of a single strand of pearls, and carried the white prayer book given her for the occasion by her father and mother. It was adorned with a shower of ribbons into which lilacs of the valley were knotted.

Completing the wedding party were Don Sylvester of San Diego, only brother of the bridegroom, who served as best man, and Edward Schackenberg, close friend of both young people, who was usher.

Following the nuptial service, conducted so beautifully by the Rev. Mr. Bode, the entire bridal party paused in its march from the altar, to receive good wishes of the guests gathered in the foyer of the church. Mrs. Bode, mother of the bride, joined the receiving line, and was crowned in black with ecru lace trimming, enhanced by her corsage cluster of pale pink carnations.

A bridal dinner in the Bode home, complimented the new Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester just prior to their departure for a northern automobile trip, for which the bride was smartly garbed in gray with all blue accessories. Upon their return they will proceed at once to the home Mr. Sylvester

Miscellaneous Shower Tendered Bride by Sister Hostesses

A post-nuptial courtesy honoring Mrs. W. Lloyd Shearer (Margaret Peterson) was extended Saturday by Miss Nan Mead and Miss Lolita Mead who invited a group of mutual friends to their home at 2119 North Main street for an afternoon of contract bridge.

The affair had been designated as a miscellaneous shower and gifts which guests deposited with their hostesses on arriving were presented the honoree after the bridge play in a basket appropriately ornamented with cupids, wedding bells and roses.

Chrysanthemums in yellow and white brought a fall note to the color scheme which hostesses pursued in their several party appointments. Especially striking were those employed for the refreshment course, which guests enjoyed after Mrs. Shearer's gifts had been displayed.

Other gifts went to Mrs. Russell Wilson and Miss Georgia Walton, who had at contract, both receiving Madeira linen pieces. A guest prize of Madeira linen also went to Mrs. Shearer.

Invited to share in Saturday's compliment were Mesdames Bernard Parker, Robert S. Wade, Lyman Farwell, Leland Pinley, Douglas Peterson, Edmund C. West, Russell Wilson and Carl Lorch Jr.; the Mesdames Evelyn Metzger, Constance Cruikshank, Helen Sawyer, Mary Jane Owens, Thelma Patton, Rowena Moore, Anne Tarter, Virginia Berry, Eleanor Dana, Sue Fricker, Boyd Joplin, Helen Kubitz, Mary Safley, Charlotte Moulton and Georgia Walton, all of Santa Ana; Mrs. Frank F. Mead Jr., of Orange; Miss Helen Young of Huntington Beach; Mrs. Gene Hays of Glendale; Mrs. Anne Woodruff and the Mesdames Alice Pacey, Frances Foley and Ethel Stewart, all of Los Angeles. In addition to the honoree, Mrs. W. Lloyd Shearer, and the hostesses, Miss Nan Mead and Miss Lolita Mead.

When Things Start to "Work" Here is a wall of woe that almost brought tears to my eyes when I read it.

"Dear Ann, I have discovered that every bit of my ripe tomato relish is spoiled. I have followed directions right to the dot and can't seem to understand the cause. Can anything be done about it? When I opened the jars the relish was 'working'—Mrs. J. L. R."

If materials used are fresh, and we assume that they were in this case, I can't see what caused the whole batch to work unless the jars, rubbers or tops were not sufficiently sterilized. One little bug can wreck the whole works—that's a foregone conclusion.

Care in sterilizing containers—and by sterilizing I mean boiling at a gallop for 10 minutes, not just dipping jars and tops into hot water then out—and in canning the material while it is still boiling should keep the product indefinitely.

Only the action of bacteria can cause canned material to "work." Nothing else! Often lids are used that were taken off the jars last year, a knife was probably rimmed under them to loosen them up, and that is where the trouble originates in 75 per cent of spoiled canning—spoiled lids.

Once fermentative action begins nothing can be done that I know of to save the article for food. I'm sorry in this particular instance, for this is a grand relish. I made gallons of it and find that it keeps perfectly.

Holiday Celebration Includes Luncheon And Dinner

Modernette club members were among the many who observed the recent holiday in fitting manner, holding a Halloween revel in the ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Leach near Chino. The affair started at noon for the club group, who enjoyed a luncheon served by Mrs. Leach.

Old clothes, from hiking suits to barefoot boy costumes were donned by guests when they prepared to decorate the large yard with cornstalks, pumpkin heads with grotesque faces and other Halloween symbols. This was in readiness for an evening dinner, with husbands arriving to take part about 8 o'clock.

Club members spent the afternoon playing bridge. The dinner for their husbands was served from an outdoor table, and included wieners and buns, hamburgers, steaks, pickles, pies, apples and coffee. The meats were prepared on an open grate whose glowing fire contributed a cheery setting for the evening.

Following, the group took a long hike across corn fields, and pumpkin patches, returning to the Leach home for outdoor games as well as card games indoors. Cider and other Halloween refreshments were served during the evening.

Those taking part in the merry event were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Patmor, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Belding, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blower, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Morton, Mrs. Dwight Miller and daughter Barbara, Mrs. Pete Hansen, Mrs. Elmer Gates, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Hammetten, Mr. and Mrs. Price, Miss Adabuth Ellis, Harry Clayton, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Anderson and the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Leach.

The presentation of a birthday cake to J. H. Shaw, high priest of Royal Arch chapter No. 73, was a surprise feature of a meeting of chapter members and their families held Thursday night in Masonic temple. The cake was baked by Mrs. J. W. Hancock, chairman of the evening.

Floral decorations were in charge of Mrs. C. E. Moore, yellow candles in yellow holders adorning the tables, where a menu, prepared by a committee under Mrs. J. W. Hancock, chairman, was served. Working with her were Mesdames William H. Thomas, C. E. Moore, A. F. Nothony, E. Steffensen and E. W. Featherly.

Repairing to the lounge while men held lodge session, women guests found places at seven tables of bridge, dividing the evening's honors between Mrs. Frank Hoffman, high; Mrs. A. F. Nothony, scored high, and Mrs. H. G. Lyman, low.

Miss Sherrill Spurgeon Reveals Betrothal at Informal Luncheon

An open secret was acknowledged yesterday when Miss Sherrill Spurgeon and her mother, Mrs. William H. Spurgeon Jr., of 1617 North Main street were at home to a group of the former's friends for the purpose of formally acquainting them with the engagement of Miss Spurgeon to George Rice III, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Rice Jr. of Alhambra. Announcement was made at a luncheon, when Miss Spurgeon displayed her engagement ring. No date has been arranged for the ceremony.

Following the luncheon, guests surrounded Mrs. Harvey Smith Jr., requesting fortune readings, a diversion which occupied the remainder of the afternoon.

Luncheon guests, comprising Scripps college classmates and other school friends, dispersed at an early hour, the former group returning to Claremont, their places being taken early in the evening by Mr. and Mrs. George Rice Jr. and their son, who arrived with a few intimate friends of both families.

Miss Spurgeon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Abbott of Fontana, accompanied the Scripps students to Santa Ana.

A graduate of the Santa Ana high school, Miss Spurgeon will receive her diploma next June from Scripps college, where she has been majoring in economic geography. Her fiancé, who completed work at California Institute of Technology in 1931, is with his father in the commercial printing business in Los Angeles, being identified with the George Rice and Sons concern.

Present for yesterday's announcement were the Mesdames Jane Clow, Alice Miller, Dana Miller and Ellen Peters, of Scripps college; the Mesdames Kay Barr, Florence Brownridge and Clara Kate Owens, Santa Ana; the Mesdames Eleanor Mattel and Eleanor Board of the University of California and Betty Trout of Los Angeles.

HITLER LOSES MANY SEATS IN SUNDAY BALLOT

Von Papen Retains Power Although Communists Make Big Gains

BERLIN, Nov. 7.—(UP)—Germany emerged from its general election today with the "dictatorship" cabinet of Chancellor Franz von Papen still in power, but far short of any parliamentary majority.

The minority supporting von Papen woned fractionally in the election. The Fascist party of Adolf Hitler lost some strength, and the Communists gained.

Otherwise, the anomalous political situation under which the conservative von Papen government rules over the voice of a defiant but shackled reichstag remained almost unchanged. It was in every way a deadlock, and the country awaited an even more embittered struggle between von Papen and Hitler for power.

Germany voted overwhelmingly against the von Papen government, despite its minor gain. The Hitlerites, although they lost 35 seats in parliament, actually fell only four per cent behind their vote in the total pool throughout the country, compared to the result of last July's election.

The polling nevertheless confirmed the belief that Hitlerism had begun to recede from its sensational two year climb, culminating in the peak of last July, when his followers had 37.03 per cent of the total votes, compared to approximately 33.2 yesterday. Hitler therefore appeared to have reached the point for a show down. Since he cannot expect further parliamentary gains in the near future, his supporters looked for him to give a final warning to von Papen to stand aside and let the strongest party rule.

Provisional final returns for 531 seats in the reichstag, based on a total of 35,279,001 votes were as follows:

Party	Seats	Votes
Anti-Government:
National Socialists (Hitlerites)	195	11,712,785
Social Democrats	125	7,227,394
Communists	109	5,747,309
Catholics (Centrists)	69	4,223,623
Bavarian Peoples Party	19	1,081,932
Constitutional Party	10	338,064
Pro-Government:
Pro-Government	1	63,999
Nationalists	51	3,064,977
Folk's Party	11	660,092
Agrarians	2	105,158
Agarian Peoples Party	0	4,686
Farmers Party	3	118,392

A Republican Vote for McAdoo

I am a Republican, but since political conditions are what they are, I am going to vote for William Gibbs McAdoo for United States Senator. I believe it to be for the best interests of the citrus and business interests of this state. I hope that you will consider carefully my reason for voting for this man, and if you agree with the logic of the argument I hope that you will be able to master whatever prejudices you may have and vote as I am going to vote.

Republican leaders acknowledge that our next Congress will be Democratic. The House of Representatives was Democratic last year. Five Republican Senators are up for re-election. The defeat of only one means that the Democrats will have a majority in the Senate, and it is very likely, according to the best reports, that several of these vacancies will be filled by Democrats.

The Literary Digest, after taking a nationwide poll of 3,500,000 votes, declares that Roosevelt will carry 41 states. It declares that he may carry 5 of the remaining seven states, and points out the fact that their poll shows that Massachusetts is for Hoover by a small majority. Their 1928 poll in this respect was the same, but Smith carried the state. The only states which at this time seem safe for Hoover are Maine and Vermont.

The Hearst newspaper poll which Columbia University of New York has found to be the most accurate in the past, shows Hoover hopelessly behind. Both of these polls have been more than 95 per cent accurate in their predictions.

With the country going Democratic, our question is what had we better do about our United States Senator?

Should we send a Democrat to join the party which by itself can pass legislation, or shall we send a Republican to antagonize a Democratic administration? To me there is only one answer: Vote for a Democrat.

California has the opportunity of sending one of the nation's leading Democrats to the United States Senate. She has the opportunity of sending a leader of the party in power. She has the opportunity of sending a man who will have great influence with Roosevelt because he took the leading part in nominating him. He more than any other man swung the Democratic convention to Roosevelt. He will have more power in the next administration than almost any other man in the United States aside from the President himself.

Opposed to him in this state are two candidates. The first of them is a rich young playboy searching the world for more to drink. Just wet, nothing more. No ability, no experience, no moral fibre.

His other opponent has no party affiliations. In the last session of Congress Shipstead, a lone wolf, exerted considerable influence because he held the balance of power, due to an even division between the Republicans and Democrats. In the next session the man without a party will just simply be an extra man. Just a case of no party, no power, no influence, and of no respect to us in tariff and financial matters.

Mr. McAdoo favors a tariff on all farm products and on oil. We, the people of California, have the privilege of availing ourselves of the services of this outstanding Democrat. We have the privilege of sending a man to the United States Senate who when he rises to speak on behalf of the tariff, needed financial reforms, or any other economic questions, will command the respectful attention of the entire nation.

I believe no man will serve us better. To me this is a question not of party regularity, but a plain question of who can serve us best.

I hope I have convinced you that you should vote for McAdoo.

Transportation To Polls To Be Furnished

In an effort to get all qualified voters to the polls tomorrow to exercise their franchise as citizens, Santa Ana Post No. 131, American Legion, will furnish transportation for all voters unable to get to the polls in any other manner, officials said today.

A number of Legion members will be on duty with cars to transport any persons who call American Legion hall at 2700 from their homes to and from the polls.

The committee of Legion members who are working on the transportation is not campaigning for or against any political party or candidate, but is interested only in getting as many voters to the polls as possible, leaders said.

LYMAN KING WILL SUPPORT M'ADOO

REDLANDS, Nov. 7.—Supporting William Gibbs McAdoo for United States senator from California, former State Senator Lyman King, publisher of the Redlands Daily Facts who is a life-long Republican, published an editorial in his paper giving his reasons for backing McAdoo.

The main reason King gave for choosing McAdoo was that he could not cast his ballot for a man who makes the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment his only plea for office. He said he wished there was a Republican he could vote for. He also declared he could not vote for Shuler, who he termed a "common scold."

King declared that McAdoo was familiar with the ropes in Washington and could be relied upon to support citrus and other agricultural tariffs that are essential to this district.

Feature Spanish Chicken Dish At Cooking School

Chicken a la valencia will be prepared and served, while suggestions for the rest of the Spanish meal will be given. Among other foods to be prepared are a platter meal of frankfurters and sautéed green tomatoes, limas Louisiana and banana muffins.

ORANGE, Nov. 7.—Eighty years ago a baby girl of two years and a sturdy boy of four were playmates in Ohio. The childhood friendship ripened as years went by into a romance which culminated in a happy marriage, the sixty-fourth anniversary of which is being observed today by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Yost of 265 South Center street.

The two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Yost, Mrs. D. L. Huffine of Long Beach and Mrs. A. H. Barnes, acted as hostesses at the reception this afternoon and the home was filled all afternoon with friends and relatives who came to offer felicitations to the couple.

Married In Ohio

Mrs. Yost, was formerly Miss Sarah Oyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Oyler. Mr. and Mrs. Yost were married at Marshalltown, Ohio, at a quiet ceremony, the pretty dark-eyed bride wearing a blue meringue gown, made with the wide loop skirts and flowing sleeves of that period. The minister was the Rev. E. J. Price and the marriage certificate given in the living room of their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Yost have six children, Mrs. A. H. Barnes of Orange; Mrs. D. L. Huffine of Long Beach; Mrs. Gertrude Learnard of Long Beach; William Yost of Sunnyvale, Calif.; Alva Yost of Bolivar, Kans.; and Charles F. Yost of Kansas City, Mo.; nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Mrs. Yost's people were among the first settlers of Pennsylvania, coming to America before the Revolutionary war and Mr. Yost's parents also were early settlers of that state, both families making the trip to Ohio by covered wagon.

In Orange Four Years

Settling on a farm in Ohio they lived in that state and near Kansas City, Mo., until 1905, when they moved to Long Beach remaining in that city nine years and coming to Orange four years ago. Since coming here they have been members of the First Methodist church and previous to that time were identified with the Church of the United Brethren of all their lives. Mr. Yost has never used tobacco in any form and his wife is never seen without the white ribbon of the W. C. T. U. pinned on her dress.

The years have set lightly on both Mr. and Mrs. Yost, both are very erect and active. They both declare that the years of their life have passed so swiftly that the only way they can realize how long a time it has been since they were married is by looking at their children surrounded by their families. It is not difficult to be happy though married, says the bride of 64 years, just be good to each other, she advises.

Mr. Yost voted for General Ulysses S. Grant the year after he was married and he had just attained his majority. Since that time he has voted for 15 Republican candidates for president, the sixteenth occasion coming tomorrow, when he will cast his vote for Herbert Hoover.

FESTIVAL LEADERS TO BE APPOINTED

Appointment of a chairman and a committee to take charge of the big holiday festival which will be staged beginning around December 1 by the Santa Ana Merchants' association, will be an important item of business to be transacted at a board of directors' meeting to be held at 7:15 o'clock tonight in the new headquarters in the Arcade building on North Main street. It was announced today by Manager A. Cavalli.

As the by-laws of the organization, formerly the merchants' division of the chamber of commerce, call for 12 directors, three more directors will be named at the meeting tonight. Plans for the holiday festivities will be discussed at the meeting as well.

FOOD MARKETS TO CLOSE ON NOV. 11

Approximately 90 per cent of the food markets in Santa Ana are expected to be closed on Armistice day, it was learned today in a survey conducted by A. Cavalli, manager of the Santa Ana Merchants' association.

Out of respect to the American Legion, which is staging a big celebration in Fullerton on Armistice day, the entire Grand Central Market will be closed on the holiday, it was announced by George M. Boardman, manager of the market. Merchants in the market at a recent meeting, voted unanimously to close their stores on Armistice day.

According to Cavalli, the Alpha Beta stores and many other food markets will close in observance of the holiday.

New Midway Home Destroyed

The new home of Dale Dunstan on Roosevelt street in Midway City was destroyed by flames Saturday afternoon, the family being away at the time and neighbors not discovering the fire until it had gained great headway.

Two pet canaries were destroyed in the fire, which was believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Yost are observing their 64th wedding anniversary at their home, 265 South Center street, today. Tomorrow Mr. Yost will cast his vote for Herbert Hoover, making the 16th time he has voted for a Republican candidate.

TWELVE HURT IN WEEK END AUTO CRASHES

An increase in the number of automobile accident victims in Orange county was noted over the week end, with reports of six crashes in which 12 persons were hurt. Some of those injured is believed to have been fatally hurt.

Five persons were injured at 11 o'clock yesterday morning when an automobile and a truck collided at Center street and Fairview avenue, north of Buena Park.

The car was being driven by Mrs. Ella Woehr, of 6315 Fourth avenue, Los Angeles, travelling east on Center street when it collided with a truck operated by G. Aubeniso, of Ontario. Those injured were Mr. and Mrs. Woehr, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newbound, of Grants Pass, Ore., friends of the Woehrs who were riding in the Woehr car, and Mrs. Paul Hoffman of 1043 West Fourth street, Los Angeles. The most seriously injured is Mrs. Newbound, who suffered a fracture of the hip and a fractured knee, it was said. All were taken to an Anaheim hospital.

Cars Off Road

Mrs. Margaret Rodemeyer, 40, of 1514 North Main street, Santa Ana, was cut and bruised at 6:30 p. m. yesterday when the car she was driving, ran off the road, one and a half miles north of El Toro, according to a report filed with the California Highway Patrol. She was taken to the Santa Ana Valley hospital for first aid treatment and then removed to her home.

Manuel Simmons, of 57 East 14th street, Los Angeles, is a patient in the Orange county hospital, badly hurt, as the result of his car running off the road a half mile south of Irvine at 9 a. m. yesterday.

The car struck a telephone pole, skidded several feet and then crashed into a tree. Ida Reed, of 613 Lacy street, suffered cuts about the head at 9:30 a. m. yesterday when a taxi cab in which she was riding collided at Sixth and Bush streets with a machine driven by Elizabeth Morgan of 544 Citron street, Anaheim.

The taxi cab was being driven by T. G. Kirby. The woman was taken to the Santa Ana Valley hospital where she was given first aid treatment.

Babies Hurt

Two little babies were reported injured at Sixth and Parton streets at 6:15 p. m. Saturday, when the car in which they were riding collided with a car driven by Mildred Moore of 809 West Sixth street. The Moore car hit the rear end of a car driven by Everett W. Yates of 1459 Maple street, according to a report filed with the city police.

The children were Betty Louise Yates, two months old, and Walter Yates, 17 months old. Groceries in the car were thrown against Betty Louise and Walter was pitched against the windshield.

Two youths from San Diego escaped serious injuries at 2 a. m. Sunday, when they were riding collided with a light car on the Gallivan crossing near San Juan Capistrano and turned over.

The light car was driven by Mrs. Lawrence Cumrine, of San Juan Capistrano. Mrs. Cumrine

SORE ON FACE DOCTOR SAID "USE RESINOL"

"For two months I had a small sore spot on my face which would not heal. Then I remembered that when my daughter was a small child the doctor told me to use Resinol for a similar condition from which she was suffering and it healed very quickly. I decided to try Resinol for myself. Being flesh colored I could keep it on during the day as well as at night, and in a few days the results were delightful." (Signed)—Mrs. G. N. FINAL RITES ARE HELD FOR ALONZO LOPEZ

Final rites for Alonzo Lopez, 32, son of an old Spanish California family and representing the fifth generation of native born Californians, were conducted Saturday in St. Joseph's Catholic church.

The Rev. Father F. A. Welkenman read a low mass in the presence of an unusually large congregation of relatives and family friends, and two cousins of the young man, Maurice and George Young Jr., and William Sandon, were acolytes serving at mass. Madame Manuela V. Rudrow-Rafferty came from her Hollywood home expressly to sing, using "Nearer My God To Thee," "Lead Kindly Light" and her own beautiful "Ave Maria." Miss Ruth Armstrong was accompanist.

Pall bearers included the two brothers-in-law of the young man, J. D. LeBlanc and Alphonse Pages; his cousins, Wilbur Young, Harry Borchers and Eugene Hill, and his friend for many years, Wesley Jayne. Burial followed in Santa Ana cemetery by the side of the father, William H. T. Lopez, who preceded him in death by 28 years, and the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Alonzo Waite, prominent in the early history of Santa Ana. J. A. Waite was owner of the Santa Ana Herald, which in the process of time, evolved into the present day Santa Ana Register.

Alonzo Lopez graduated from Santa Ana schools and College of Agriculture at University of California, Berkeley, receiving his master's degree in entomology. For three years past he had been entomologist for the Philippine Sugar company, with headquarters on Negros Island. He had returned to the home of his mother, Mrs. Olivia Lopez, Hollywood, some two weeks ago to recuperate from an illness, and his death came suddenly Wednesday, November 2 in Monrovia.

Physician Says Not Consulted

Dr. D. A. Harwood, Santa Ana physician, telephoned The Register today and stated that his name was used without permission in an advertisement in Saturday's Register that detailed a list of prominent citizens purportedly supporting W. C. Jerome for county supervisor.

"I was not consulted about the matter," Dr. Harwood said. "The first thing I knew about it was when I saw my name in the paper. I have not expressed my views about the supervisor race at all, and do not care to do so now." Dr. Harwood requested that his statement be published.

Editor Register:

Upon reviewing the report of the debate held Friday evening at city hall between J. A. Beek, secretary of the senate, state of California, and J. A. Vye, regarding the accuracy of a certain statement circulated by Vye and having to do with the senatorial campaign in this district, and having appeared in the issue of the Register of November 5, I wish to make the following statement:

I, with 23 others attended the debate in question and having given very close attention to both sides, submit the following to supplement the published report of the meeting.

First, referring to the asserted increased salaries bill passed in 1929. Due to Senator Edwards' efforts, the recommendation of the Orange county grand jury for salary increases, was cut in half and a substantial savings made for the taxpayers.

Second, Senate Bill No. 933 relating to powers of boards of supervisors simply defined supervisory powers, was only permissive, and without any opposition whatever, and being only permissive was not questioned as ultimate action was a matter of boards of supervisors to determine.

Third, the circular states that Edwards voted "yes" on a bill relating to gambling. This is true. The "yes" vote WAS AGAINST GAMBLING as the records will reveal, and Mr. Vye admitted the facts as pointed out by Mr. Beek but remarked that it was about gambling. I consider this a direct attempt to mislead the public and such methods are to say the least unworthy of a senatorial or any other candidate.

Senate Bill 683 relating to pensions was voted by the people at the 1930 election and the legislature was in duty bound to ratify the order of the voters as expressed at a state election.

Senate bill 325 relating to bank taxation. Yes, Edwards voted "yes" and Mr. Beek read a letter from the state board of equalization stating that this bill provided substantial increased taxation on banks.

It was proved by the senate records and conceded by both parties to the debate that Senator Edwards voted against repeal of the Wright act and also against a bill directed at the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Edwards always has voted right on all moral issues. The senatorial records prove it.

Now comes that much discussed "Sharkey" bill. Both speakers conceded that Edwards voted for it. BUT further, Mr. Beek pointed out that Edwards voted against sending it out of committee and that Senator Edwards voted in favor of the amendments offered by Senator Inman, the chief opponent of the Sharkey bill, and the independent oil companies. In fact Edwards' record so far as I can ascertain, shows that he invariably voted with the

S. A. ELKS TO HOLD ELECTION PARTY TUESDAY

An especially large attendance is expected at the Elks' clubhouse tomorrow evening, when a big election party will be held in conjunction with a special social program featuring an address by the Grand Exalted Ruler of the Elks, Judge Floyd E. Thompson of Moline, Illinois.

Judge Thompson's message will establish a precedent as it will be the first time that a grand exalted ruler of the order employs the medium of an electrical phonograph transcription to talk to all of the 1500 clubs throughout the United States at one time. The address will be given precisely at 11 p. m., which is an hour of special significance for the Elks.

In addition to a program of social activities, members and their friends, who are also invited, will hear a minute-by-minute broadcast of the latest election returns. G. P. Campbell, exalted ruler of the local order, pointed out that the Elks is a non-political and non-sectarian organization.

Members of the committee appointed by Exalted Ruler Campbell to conduct the unusual event are Dr. Robert C. Currie, chairman, Don Jerome and V. L. Monro.

Admission to the party will be a bundle of clothes, groceries, toys, furniture or anything the Elks can use to help alleviate distress, especially around Christmas time. A short business session will be held at 7:30 p. m.

Independent oil companies during the entire session.

Believing in fair play and a square deal all around, I submit that the record of Senator Edwards at Sacramento as well as home, shows clearly that he has worked hard and efficiently for the best interests of his home people, and that Orange County cannot afford not to re-elect him this year of all years. J. C. METZGAR.

Respectfully yours,
LOYAL K. KING.

The chickens that escaped the coop flew round and round and looped the loop. They were not used to flying and seemed clumsy as could be.

"I hope they all land safe and sound," cried Duncy. "When they're on the ground, I'll have to try and catch them. How I'll do it I can't see."

The flying horse then said, "Well, son, to me it was a heap of fun to watch those crazy chickens. They were tickled to get out."

"But when they flapped and flapped their wings and started doing funny things, they looked just like they didn't know what it was all about."

"However, they are safe on earth. I'll hurry now, for all I'm worth and take you down right near them. You can catch them all with feed."

"Just use the bag the farmer let you have and it will work. I'll bet. They haven't eaten for some time and food is what they need."

"A grand idea," Duncy cried. Then came the end of his fine ride. The flying horse swooped to the ground and Duncy shouted "Hey!"

"If all you chickens want to eat, I have some grain that is a treat. I'll give you all you want if none of you will run away."

He then spread feed upon the ground and, as the chickens gathered round and started eating it, he figured out a clever plan.

Right to the farm I'll run he thought, and there the chickens can be caught. The chickens trailed behind him as along the road he ran.

The flying horse cried, "Gee! That's great. The chickens only

Bryan's Bold Fight against Mark Hanna

The Democratic candidate and the Republican candidate-maker were the real warriors in 1896, even though it was McKinley who won the presidency

By HENRY W. LAWRENCE

THE presidential campaign of 1896 centered on two men: the Democratic candidate, William Jennings Bryan, and the Republican candidate-maker, Marcus Alonzo Hanna.

To understand these two leaders thoroughly is to understand the fundamentals of the desperate warfare they waged, with millions of dollars and billions of words.

Bryan specialized in eloquence and upheaval; Hanna preferred organization and stability. Friends and foes have described these warriors and their battle in such labels as, "Saint George and the Dragon," "Don Quixote and the Steamroller," "the Mob vs. Management," "Misery vs. Money," and "the silver tongue vs. the gold standard."

Hanna had carefully groomed McKinley for the presidency. Bryan, however, was entirely self-groomed for that office, and like many another self-made man, if he did not actually worship his Maker, he at least had great confidence in Him.

An illustration of this confidence, together with a specimen of his oratory, more pleasing than profound, is afforded by his maiden speech in Congress, in 1892, when he waded boldly into an attack on the Republican tariff of 1890. The thorough quizzing and heckling he got from older members of the opposition failed to embarrass him. In fact, it stirred him to livelier eloquence and bolder sallies.

SAID one challenger, "Are you to be understood as opposed to a state or national protection to be extended to the beet sugar industry?"

This was supposed to be a tough nut for the young Nebraskan to crack, since the sugar beet growers of that state had been clamoring for just that kind of protection; but he shot back, without displaying even a flicker of hesitation:

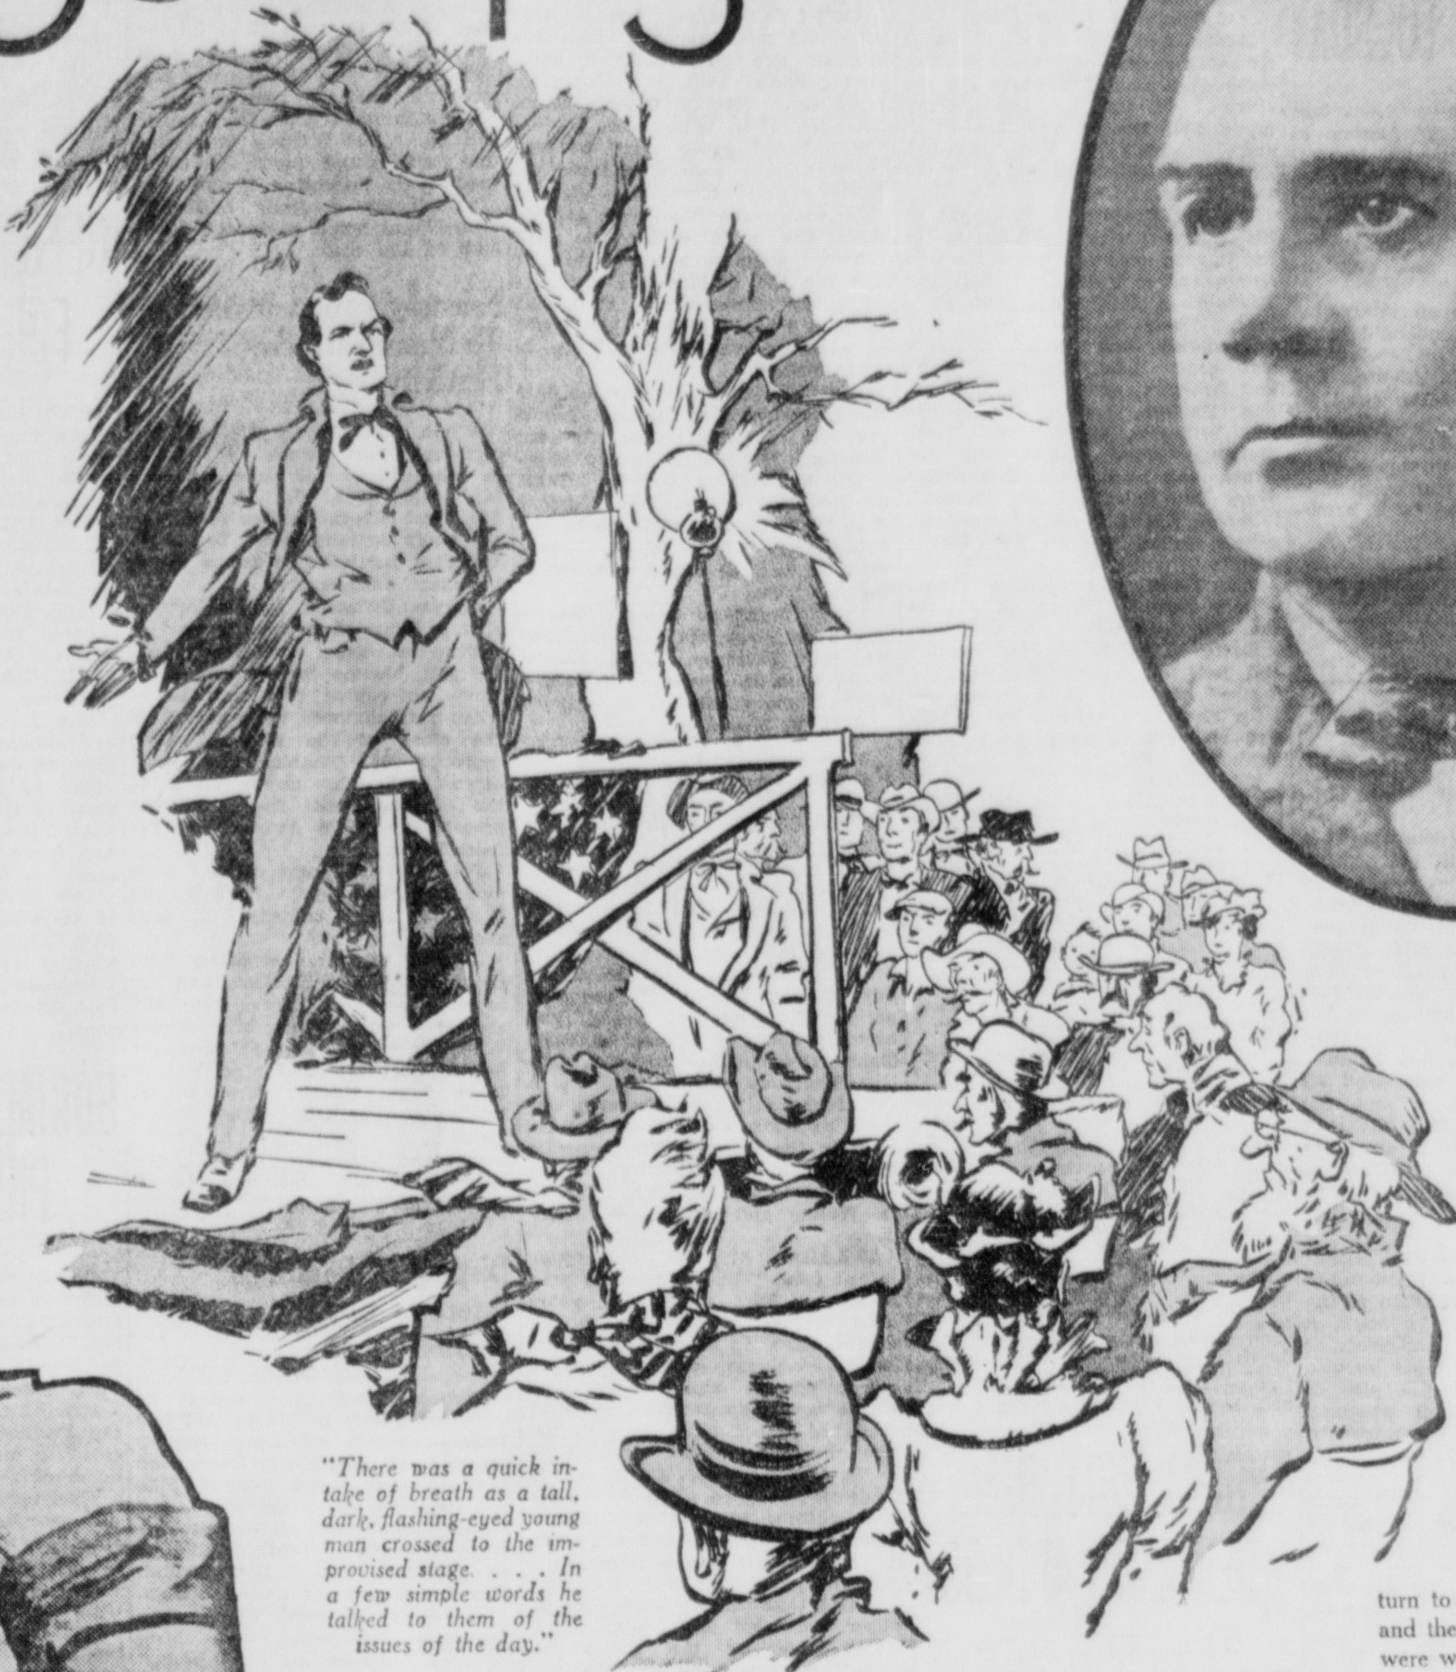

"I am, most assuredly. And when it is necessary to come down to Congress and ask for a protection or a bounty for an industry in my own state which I should refuse to an industry in another state, I shall cease to represent Nebraska in Congress."

More heckling followed, with lively retorts; so lively that when Bryan's time was up, the House permitted him to go on indefinitely.

The boldness and fluency of this fledgling congressman thrust him suddenly into the limelight—where he ever longed to be. The press made him a hero overnight.

IN many respects the opposite of Bryan was his great antagonist, Mark Hanna. If Bryan's long suit was hot air as his opponents charged, Hanna's was hard cash.

He knew how to get the cash, for himself

"There was a quick intake of breath as a tall, dark, flashing-eyed young man crossed to the improvised stage. . . . In a few simple words he talked to them of the issues of the day."

William Jennings Bryan . . . a seldom-published photograph showing him as he looked during the Spanish-American War, in which he served as colonel in a regiment of volunteers.

paign, a Kansas Populist (who related this incident very circumstantially to the present writer) was introduced to Mr. Hanna. When the conversation turned to Bryan's chances for winning the presidency, Hanna suddenly exploded with the following blood-curdling threat.

"Do you think," said he, "that we'd let that damned lunatic get into the White House? Never! You know you can hire half the people of the United States to shoot down the other half, if it's necessary; and we've got the money to hire them!"

THIS sounds pretty violent, but Hanna was probably letting off steam, somewhat recklessly. Moreover, the campaign itself was violent in its thoughts and words; not the politicians only, but also the pulpit and the press. The following extract gives the tone of many a sermon—this one happened to be preached by one of the most widely-known of American pulpit orators.

"This pulpit is absolutely non-partisan," he began, "but I must be heard and will be heard against all dishonesty and anarchy and kindred evil. . . . I must speak every Sunday from now on until November. I shall denounce the Chicago (i. e., the Democratic) platform. That platform was made in Hell!"

The morning after Bryan's defeat for the presidency, a leading Republican newspaper pronounced the following gentle eulogy over his political corpse and the cause he had championed:

"It has been defeated and destroyed, because right is right and God is God. Its nominal head was worthy of the cause. He was only a puppet in the blood-imbuéd hands of Altgeld, the anarchist, and Debs, the revolutionist, and other desperadoes of that stripe."

"BUT Bryan was a willing puppet, willing and eager. Not one of his masters was more apt at lies and forgeries and blasphemies and all the nameless iniquities of that campaign against the Ten Commandments. He goes down with the cause, and must abide with it in the history of infamy."

"He had less provocation than Benedict Arnold, less intellectual force than Aaron Burr, less manliness and courage than Jefferson Davis. He was the rival of them all in deliberate wickedness and treason to the republic."

Looking back on this famous campaign of

Mark Hanna, the Ohio business man who was Bryan's real opponent in the hot campaign of 1896.

1896 nearly 40 years afterward, we find it hard to realize how intensely stirred the people were. Quite possibly Bryan and his hosts were thoroughly unsound in their economic theories, but their grievances were real and their consciences at least as clean as those of their contemptuous antagonists.

When Bryan's great opportunity came, in the Chicago convention, his auditors and still more their constituents were all set to welcome a political Messiah and a series of economic miracles. Bryan was ready to furnish both.

It was nearly midnight before his turn to speak came. The June night was hot and the convention hall stifling. The delegates were wearied with much oratory.

Bryan himself was a bit anxious about his coming performance, sensing that it was the critical moment of his career.

Presently he strode forth on that platform to assume the leadership of the Democratic party for the next quarter century, and immediately to set the pitch and the slogan for the coming campaign: "We defy them!" Their power; their money; their brains.

IT was not in this convention hall, however, that he spent himself most freely for the cause of "the forgotten man." It was rather amid scenes such as that described by a recent biographer, scenes repeated endlessly in his campaign pilgrimage of 18,000 miles to contact nearly 5,000,000 plain people:

"The train drew up at a little frame railroad station at two hours after midnight," says this writer. "Near it was a speaker's stand of plain pine boards, decorated with flags and bunting. Flaring gasoline torches mounted on yellow pine posts threw a sallow light on the front rows of hundreds of plainly clothed men and women who had driven for miles to hear the Great Commoner. The cold autumn wind swept down across the prairie and the audience, wrapped in blankets, shivered."

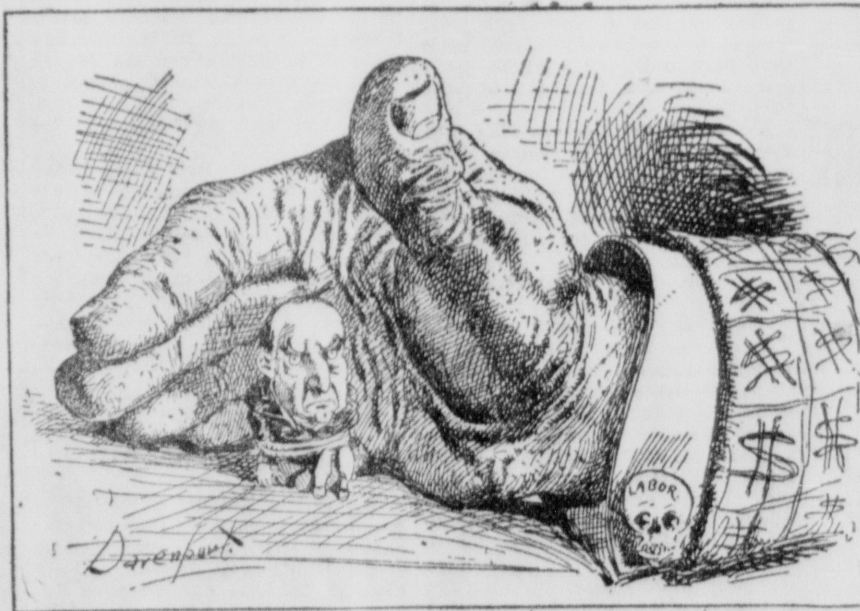

"There was a quick intake of the breath as a tall, dark, flashing-eyed young man stepped from the rear platform of the train and crossed to the improvised stage. In a few simple words he talked to them of the issues of the day."

"Then his eloquence mounted. His words began to pour forth with torrential energy. Those who heard him, looking up at the valiant figure preaching democracy in the flickering flare of the gas torches, had a hope that at last they had found a leader who knew them and would be true to them."

WHILE Bryan was carrying on his campaign with very little financial support, Hanna was mobilizing and throwing into action a host of paid orators and many tons of printed matter. In so doing, he collected and expended money on a scale previously unknown, and for this he was abused and hated almost as heartily as was Bryan.

He was quoted and pictured as a monster of iniquity, whereas he was, in fact, little more than a scapegoat for a political system which he operated more efficiently than anybody had before him.

As the campaign ended, it became clear to all that the money had been well spent. McKinley had uttered well chosen words to the delegations which visited his home. Bryan had pursued the voters throughout the nation with floods and flights of oratory. The final election returns, however, seemed to indicate that more potent than the eloquence of either of the candidates was the still, small voice of the dollar.

A sample of campaign literature in '96. . . . A cartoon depicting McKinley as a pawn in the control of big money.

and for his party, and he knew how to spend it where it would do the most good. When he passed the hat among the wealthy they didn't shut their eyes and turn away; not before they had tossed in something handsome; or, if any tried to, he roared at them.

The story is told—quite probably it is not literally true—that one tightwad millionaire who declined to contribute after Hanna had sent him a somewhat urgent follow-up letter, remarked afterward that, "Mark Hanna is a very poor speller. He spells 'lousy' with two s's, and 'skunk' with a c."

Another story shows either that the great president-maker was a desperately determined person or that he sometimes said what he did not altogether mean.

During the bitter heats of the 1896 campaign, a Kansas Populist (who related this incident very circumstantially to the present writer) was introduced to Mr. Hanna. When the conversation turned to Bryan's chances for winning the presidency, Hanna suddenly exploded with the following blood-curdling threat.

CYRUS K. CURTIS

Philadelphia dispatches announce the retirement of Cyrus K. Curtis from the presidency of the Curtis Publishing Company, publishers of the Saturday Evening Post, The Ladies' Home Journal, the Country Gentleman, besides the Philadelphia Ledger and the New York Evening Post.

Mr. Curtis, like so many of our wealthy business men, started up from nothing. His first profits were three cents, obtained from the sale of a few newspapers on the street. From that time Mr. Curtis' rise was phenomenal. His great money-makers have been the Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post, and their success has been due in large measure to the men he chose as editors of these two magazines. Edward Bok, for many years the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, probably understood the feminine mind better than any man of his generation. The success of that magazine must be ascribed to him. George H. Lorimer, for forty years associated with Mr. Curtis, has made the Saturday Evening Post. He now succeeds Mr. Curtis as president of the Curtis Publishing Company. The Country Gentleman has not been as great a money maker as the other two; but those who recall the character of farm papers when Mr. Curtis began to develop the Country Gentleman know the contribution he has made to that type of paper. The format and the typography of all farm papers have improved tremendously since Mr. Curtis entered the field. In one sense, the Country Gentleman has not been a serious competitor for many farm papers. It is a bit too high-brow for the ordinary dirt farmer. It has been said that its clientele has been largely made up of gentleman farmers. These, as we know, are not very numerous.

In the newspaper field, Mr. Curtis did not succeed so well. We do not know definitely about his Philadelphia paper, but we have seen the statement that the advertising in the New York Evening Post has been steadily decreasing in recent years. It may be that Mr. Curtis' genius was not fitted for the newspaper field, or that his choices for editors were not as happy as those made for the Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post.

Mr. Curtis has been a conservative in his outlook. But it has been an intelligent conservatism, and was honestly conceived. He has been a great public benefactor, one of the greatest in the country. His native state of Maine has been greatly enriched by his bounty in one form and another. He has been a generous contributor to Bowdoin College, though he himself never attended a college. His name appears among the donors of many welfare organizations over the country. He has been genuinely public-spirited. The country thinks well of him, and his success has been an inspiration to every aspiring young man.

PERSONALITIES IN A CAMPAIGN

There are always clashes of personalities in a political campaign. They are unavoidable. When men feel strongly, they are apt to go beyond the bounds of propriety. This campaign has come dangerously near being an exhibition of bitterness which would make it very uncomfortable for the candidates when the election is over. This especially is the case when candidates for the presidency indulge in personalities.

On the fourth of March the incoming President, should Roosevelt be elected, rides to the inauguration with the retiring President. We believe there is only one case in our history when the retiring President refused to ride with his successor. That was when John Quincy Adams refused to ride with Andrew Jackson. It was a bitter campaign, and rank personalities were indulged in. The stings of the campaign lasted beyond the fourth of March. As a matter of fact, the retiring President has rarely had to ride with the man who defeated him. Cleveland had to ride with Harrison who defeated him, and four years later the situation was reversed. Wilson and Taft, whom he defeated, rode together. But Taft's bitter enemy at that time was Theodore Roosevelt. Had Theodore Roosevelt been elected, we question very much whether Taft could have ridden with him on inauguration day. The bitterness of the campaign between these two men required a number of years to overcome.

The present campaign has come very near to the breaking point between the presidential candidates. In the event of the election of Roosevelt, we should hope that a spectacle such as the country witnessed when Andrew Jackson succeeded John Quincy Adams would not be repeated.

CARRIE NATION FIGURES IN A PLAY

Little did Carrie Nation think when she was battering the furniture of saloons in Kansas that she would be the chief character in a play on Broadway, New York. She has been dead many years, but her fame as a saloon wrecker still survives. The play, "Carrie Nation," is on the boards in New York the present week. How much of a theatrical success it will be, we will not prophesy; but it is much that a poor, unknown, fanatical old lady should have achieved a national fame, or notoriety some might call it, because of her passionate convictions on the wastage and wreckage of the liquor traffic.

Doubtless the fact that she was an elderly woman gave Carrie Nation an advantage which a man performing a similar task could not have carried out. There is still enough chivalry in American life to prevent officers of the law from clubbing a woman as they would a man under similar circumstances. Yet allowing for this, it required courage for any woman to do what Carrie Nation did. Only a fanatical devotion can account for such as she. We can readily believe that she was not a lovable character. We can hardly conceive of a Frances Willard doing what Carrie Nation did. Still, no one will deny that Carrie Nation had a far-reaching influence in putting the saloon out of business. How we would welcome a Carrie Nation to get busy with her hatchet on the speakeasies and the haunts of the gangsters. We predict that she would be a greater terror to them all than the police with their clubs and their guns. At any rate, she would be no respecter of persons. The reputable club and the low-down speak-easy would receive the same attention from her hatchet.

VOTE TOMORROW

Vote tomorrow, whatever may be your convictions.

Whoever you may be going to vote for for President, for United States Senator, or any other office, exercise your suffrage tomorrow. You may not be clear upon all matters, particularly the initiative measures and amendments. Where you are not clear, we would advise voting "No," because then it will not saddle a measure that may be unwise upon the people.

Most measures that are before us are favored by special interests. If all were opposed, one would probably be 95 per cent correct in his vote. But regardless of your opinion, if you have convictions, express them! And if you haven't convictions enough to go to the polls, it is high time that you had.

Our government still is republican in form, and democratic in principle. That is, it depends upon the voters. In many sections of our country, the vicious, the venal, the racketeers, all are doing their bit to put into office men who are out of sympathy with law and order, men who are in sympathy with special privilege. And there is a constantly increasing need for the exercise of the suffrage by the people who are interested in all, whose sympathies are as wide as the nation. But whatever views you may hold, vote early tomorrow, and exercise your right of kingship—your power of control over yourself, as well as contributing your part of control to the entire government.

A DANCER ADVISES THE COLLEGE

Sometimes we wonder what news will be in the papers on Thursday to replace the election speeches. We had a glimpse this morning. Ruth St. Denis, the dancer, in a lecture in Baltimore said that colleges should have a "chair of dress." Probably if the paper hadn't been so full of election matter we would have been regaled with a long extract from the lecture instead of only a meagre note.

It isn't a very arresting statement. There are plenty of courses in design. If the dancer implied that college girls don't dress well that is controversial. Most of them do and that doesn't mean extravagantly either; and those who are indifferent to clothes probably wouldn't be changed by a course in dress, even if they were compelled to take the course or consult the "chair."

A Water-Front Guardian

Christian Science Monitor

Forty-three years a fire boat was the record of the municipal tug New Yorker, auctioned off this week because her equipment was no longer adequate to combat coastal emergencies in accordance with modern methods.

No faithful fire horse of the glamorous steam-pump era was ever more deserving of retirement than this sturdy watchdog of the water front. What a history is woven around the old New Yorker! What changes have taken place within her span of service! Out on Bedloe's Island, the Goddess of Liberty had stood through the fogs of only three winters when the New Yorker took up her watch. Around Brooklyn Bridge and South Street, in the wake of half-forgotten legends, it vanished in the wake of the long since hauled away tenement cradles beyond the Battery an atmosphere of cleanliness and light has swept away the squalor and the darkness of the saloon.

Year after year, step by step, skyscrapers have climbed higher and higher above the shores where the New Yorker has maintained an unceasing vigil. Gossamer spans of steel have spun themselves across the North and East Rivers. Over the ship channels and beneath the river beds vehicular thoroughfares have pushed their way. Dirigibles have drifted above the towers of Manhattan and airplanes have zoomed over her stubby mastsheads.

In addition to her long term of service as a guardian of New York's ships and piers and merchandise, the old fire boat has taken her place in the supporting cast of ships that have extended the city's first welcome to many a home-coming hero. As an auxiliary to the municipal fleet led by good ship Macon, the New Yorker's 750-horsepower pump has taken barrels of water out of the harbor and ejected it in graceful, rainbow-tinted arcs of foamy foam to form an ephemeral arch of triumph along the conqueror's pathway.

As a fire boat, the New Yorker can no longer take her place in the line in an effort to match her fire-fighting prowess with that of Diesel-electric powered craft of the present day as they pump tons of water into the hold of a flame-swept liner or join with land forces in combating conflagrations along water-front terminals. The old fire boat will no longer await the harbor's call for help. Yet, like the faithful fire horse of the pre-motor era, one can almost imagine the New Yorker straining at her hawseers when the siren sends her modern successors into action.

On Neutrality

The San Diego Union

The Herriot plan of disarmament embodies one realistic feature—the renunciation of neutrality by nations signatory to the proposed agreement. It seeks by this device to enact into accepted international law, a fact which only the most elaborate pretense can fail to recognize. It is next to impossible, in these times, for an affected nation to remain neutral in case of war. Under the current formulas, it may retain the legal status of neutrality, but economic realities—affected, of course, by military or naval factors—compel it to enlist its resources upon one side or other of the warring groups. Alignment of some sort is unavoidable.

Neutrality in modern times is generally a legalistic device for enjoying the advantages without the drawbacks of participation.

More Truth Than Poetry

A LOSING BATTLE

On learning of a new device to rob the bee of her wealth.

We have never played fair with the bee;

We have viewed as legitimate spoil

The saccharine treasures which she

Has garnered with infinite toil.

Of our cheerful, industrious neighbor,

And gathered the honey she stored in the comb.

By dint of unwearied labor.

Still, though we mistreated the poor little thing,

She had one defense, for she always could sting.

When man cast his covetous eye

On the wealth she had salted away,

She never stood passively by,

But promptly prepared for a fray.

She called her companions, by dozens and scores,

Who over her storehouse would hover,

Until the intruder, with terrified roars,

Would rapidly scurry to cover.

While, hard on his heels, all her cohorts would throng,

Their voices uplifted in triumphant song.

But alas! with superior brains

The bee was unfitted to cope,

And now to the creature remains

No fragment nor vestige of hope.

Trust man, with his infinite greed, to contrive

Efficient, through rascally measures;

A siphon he thrusts through the floor of the hive

And extracts all its syrupy treasures.

So the bee, all in spite of her widely famed worth,

Must sooner disappear from the face of the earth.

WE SHOULDN'T SAY THIS TO HIS FACE

Mr. Tunney appears to have got into the wrong ring.

PARAGRAPHS

You can say one thing for poverty. It never prompts a fellow to make an ass of himself.

Europe's chief fear is that the depression will end before she gets rid of the war debt that caused it.

Scientists have learned to control the sex of the fly. Now if they will only make all of them crooners.

The three great political parties are the Republicans, the Democrats and Boreh.

And you never see a bronze statue of a man who always had an alibi.

MAYBE WE'VE REACHED THE PEAK OF THE DEPRESSION, BUT DOES THE PEAK IN A DEPRESSION STICK UP OR DOWN?

So long as one is born every minute, each generation will produce a few experts to harvest them.

A gentleman farmer is one who doesn't expect to make a profit. What a farmer is if he expects to make a profit isn't a nice word.

Mr. Insull was one who said public ownership wouldn't work because men are such grafters.

AMERICANISM: Jailing a man who obtains a dollar under false pretense; paying a fat salary to the man who gets an office that way.

Private servants would seem a total loss, too, if you couldn't hire them without first endowing them with the power to work miracles.

There is no sex equality. Women don't work themselves to death to fill the land with rich widowers.

But what a wonderful period this would seem if you knew you had to die next year.

ANOTHER GOOD WAY TO AVOID THE TAX ON CHECKS IS TO SHOW NO CURIOSITY WHEN YOU GET AN OPEN-FACE ENVELOPE.

Even yet there are males who say life insurance is wasted because women don't know how to invest money wisely.

The woman who married a man to reform him now has a daughter who keeps her man from drinking so much by consuming half of it herself.

What's the use? If you don't spend your money, you are keeping men jobless; if you do spend, you are flaunting your wealth in the face of the poor.

The radio campaign at least taught us the polite and dignified way to call a man a liar.

Thoughts On Modern Life

PRESERVING OUR INSTITUTIONS

Much has been said during the 1932 campaign about the importance of preserving our American institutions.

We have been told of menace after menace that confronts our institutions.

There has been not a little of sheer bunkum in this parading of bogeys.

But, sincerely and intelligently understood, the preservation of our American institutions is the most vital problem before us as a people.

We must not, however, think of the preservation of our institutions as a matter of freezing the existing forms and functions of our institutions so that they will present an embalmed changelessness to a world that is daily changing before our eyes.

The only way a living thing can be preserved is by intelligent and progressive adaptation of it to its changing environment.

The professional protector of American institutions is too much given to the idea that to preserve our institutions we must enshrine them.

In his eyes intelligent adaptation to changing conditions means irresponsible radicalism.

When the smoke of campaign battle has cleared from the field, we must buckle down to the job of thinking our way clearly through this problem of what menaces our institutions and how we can best preserve them.

Our institutions are endangered chiefly by two facts. They are:

(1) There are so many forces of change marching across our life—scientific, political, industrial, financial, social, religious—that our institutions face an extremely difficult task in keeping themselves from either a blind reaction that will ignorantly oppose all change or a blind radicalism that will become a wild worship of unguided change, just for the sake of change.

(2) Institutions have a way of crystallizing, or losing the freshness and flexibility of their youth, and becoming the charnel houses of obsolete ideas and policies.

This week I want to discuss these two dangers that confront American institutions.

Our Children

HAVE AN APPLE

"I'm not coming tomorrow."

I added up the last column with great deliberation. I could see Don in the mirror on the edge of my desk but he couldn't see my face. That is, he was not because he has many other advantages, among them the recklessness of youth.

"So?" said I leaving my columns with seeming reluctance. "Have an apple."

Felice had sent down a big basket of Macintosh reds and they stood on the table a sight to get any lad's teeth on edge with anticipation.

Don looked at me suspiciously but I continued to smile at the basket of apples. "They are the nicest apples I ever saw. Look at that purple bloom, and that shine. Prizes, aren't they? Have one."

I turned again to the columns and Don turned to the basket, took a tempting ruby apple and bit into it. Now a boy with a mouthful of juicy apple simply can't scowl. It can't be done. So he crunched contentedly enough and I ran my pencil up and down, down and up, until the last bell rang.

"There, give me your card. No need to bother your father with it every night. Come in and get it in the morning. It will be here on my desk signed and ready for McGinty." McGinty was the shop teacher, a man slow to anger and plenteous in mercy as he was ordered to be by another Master and child leader long, long ago.

"All right. Good afternoon."

"Good afternoon, Don. Take another apple. That's right. Fill up your pockets with them."

"Do you want them?"

"No. You share them with the fellows. Felice will send us some more."

"All right. Good afternoon."

"I don't have to read a famous thing like that to know how good it is, the other barber said. I don't have to see the Grand Canyon of Colorado to know it's greater than a hole in a back yard, and when did you ever read Hamlet?" he said, and my barber said, "Never, because I don't have to see the moon to know it's bigger than that gold front tooth of yours that would make you look even more ignorant than what you really are. It's such a thing wasn't impossible."

Which just then he finished doing my hair and I quick left without waiting to find out who was really the greatest.

PEACE ENVOYS MEET

On Nov. 7, 1918, the German peace envoys crossed the front and were taken to Marshal Foch's headquarters. The allied armies, however, continued their drives.

The American troops entered Sedan, French soldiers east of the Oise and north of the Aisne pushed forward 10 miles, capturing 100 villages that had been in German's possession since the early months of the war.
